He will not break a bruised reed...
Matthew 12: 20

As each of us is brought into a place of brokenness, and as we find our life as about to collapse, we turn to the cross, the place of the One who offers to us, a secure and strong attachment of insolubility to connect to. Here is the place and the One who provides the anchor in the winds of time, and the stronghold, as the forces of ego sway us, often to the breaking point. Our sure refuge is there, ready always to lovingly guide us through.

The spiritual reality of the resurrected Jesus is with us always.

~ Introduction ~

This novel could not have been conceived of by one who was writing only from past experience or from pure imagination. This novel is written with the intent of giving its readers information from the divine aspect of human consciousness and from the transcendent reality of life.

And so the writer is truly not the author but is listening to the author as she writes. Therefore this novel is a transmitted story and a story given with the intent to bring about change, transformation, to its readers. With this brief introduction let us begin.

Part I

A Recounting of my Life and Mission

I would speak of love, yet there are few who know what this word really means. I would speak of beauty, but few understand the depths of this word, and so I would speak of joy, and remember that joy is truly a word that is felt by mankind. And so it will be joy that is the subject of this work, this story, for joy is truly felt and understood by many. I can speak of joy, for joy is something that I experienced frequently in my life and most often felt it as I was with others there and with the ones who had come into my life during the many years I lived there.

I will tell you that the story I am about to tell is not one that is so very different from the lives you are living, for it is a story of family and a story of relationship, which we all are engaged in at some point in our lives.

My relationships were ones that existed from birth, but had been known in the time of life before birth, or the prebirth time. I had known the woman who was to be my mother and the man who was my father long before I actually was born into the world.

They had existed with me through many lifetimes and had now come to the Earth again ready to learn more and hopefully, give the gifts they had to give as they lived here. I had agreed to have them as my parents and to continue the learning and the mission that had been assigned to me and which I had agreed to before incarnating. It was as I had freely agreed and as I had freely felt the desire to come again to the Earth in the three dimensional form, that my birth was arranged and I entered the world again.

My mother was a person who had felt aligned with what was her desire to give birth and to have a family. This she had wanted and when she met my father they conceived without difficulty. I was the oldest child and wore the mantel of responsibility that is given to a first born. I was not one who shirked my responsibility, but this will be explained to you as our story progresses.

My childhood was neither remarkable for its hardship nor for its ease. It was a childhood which could be called typical in all ways. All ways, that is, except one. I was born with a memory of my heavenly origination and felt this keenly. I was one who knew, as one knows the sun shines or the wind blows, that I was not alone, and that I was joined with the One who made me.

My parents had given me a heritage of good health and had seen to my needs diligently, for they had taken the role of parents seriously and had put forth much effort in their duties. I had felt secure with them and had grown up to be a person who understood his tradition and his need to carry on what had been so carefully taught and lived. Now boyhood had moved into young adulthood and it was time to give back to my community. The pressure to do this was great and the expectations were felt keenly by me as I lived there. But I didn't feel aligned with these expectations, nor did I feel they were true to what I had come to know of life.

My growing up years had included almost constant dialogue or communication with the One who was my Creator, and I had been told that I had a mission to complete there, before I departed. I had been told that I had a mission to complete and this mission was of the utmost importance to fulfillment for me. It was a mission that truly had been agreed to and lovingly embraced by me as I had reincarnated again. Now the time to begin this mission was approaching and I had a loving mother and father who wanted me to do what they felt was right for me and which they felt was the duty of a first born son. It was in this dilemma that I faced my biggest challenges, for I truly loved those family members who were a part of my life, and who had given so much to me.

Here was the problem which presented to me the anxiety or the questioning which I turned to ask so often of my Source what to do. For I had come to know that the words which I had been taught by my parents were based on a set of laws that held people in bondage, and did not allow for the creative flow of life and love to happen, that were antithetical to the love of our Source, our Creator. And so I was moved to teach others about this loving relationship to our Father, whom I knew so well, and who knew me and who loved me and held me so close to Him.

My sense of responsibility to my parents and to my family members was great and I wanted to show them that they too, could free themselves from the bondage of the canonical law, that they too, could feel a direct connection to the Father and to the loving presence within. Herein lies the seedbed, the roots, and the starting point of our story.

As I had reached manhood and had never had a true conflict with my parents, I was ready to talk with them about what was pressing on my mind. I had never truly discussed the importance of my feeling, for it seemed that the way of tradition held a hold on everyone, and debate about the ways of God, or the means to come to him, were never questioned. My need to talk with them increased to the point where I asked them to allow me to show them what was so pressing on my mind. I then told them of the relationship I had with God and that I could not agree with what they had told me. I could not agree with the dietary restrictions and the restrictions on living that were held in such reverence in the traditions which were held in such sanctity. I openly refused to live this way, and so I set out to tell others and to show them the way there.

I found the peasants and the poor more ready to embrace the good news and it was to the common folk, the farmers and the tradesman, that I spoke. It was to the small towns and the villages that I travelled carrying the good news of connection. Here, many felt the truth within them, as I gave them the joyous news. Such a delightful time I had telling everyone about the love of our Father and the freedom we have to turn to Him and to commune with Him whenever want or need arises. In these small hamlets, the people joined me as I journeyed, and we were happy to be together and sharing the joy of each other and the love of our Father.

My family, who knew me to be a man of family honor, was surprised that I had left them to go tell the good news. They were surprised and dismayed, for they had counted on my allegiance to them and to the traditional way. They had thought I would be a rabbi in the temple or at least follow in my father's footsteps and take up the family business. Now the discord had caused me some anxiety, for I so loved them. I was in a time of turmoil, for I wanted them to see what I had seen and come to know, and I wanted them to rejoice as so many had learned to rejoice as they had opened up to the love of their Father. My family members had a different idea of what the religious life was like and did not see it as a life of free spirited loving and joyous frolicking together. Rather, they saw life as duty bound and centered on the traditions of the church.

We were at odds and we were not able to bridge the gap completely, although there was love from them to me. Particularly, my mother felt a love towards me and stood by me as she lived. Now I was faced with the choice to listen and follow, or fall back into the old ways, the ways that were not the truth of who and what we are. I could not do that, and I could not surrender what I had come to know so fully, to the constraints of the traditional way.

As the numbers of followers grew and as the news of Jesus swept the land, I was followed and embraced and many turned away from the traditional way. Many felt the freedom to live without the constraints that had imposed such a rigid and dogmatic life to be lived. This caused great consternation in the lands, for the people no longer honored the time worn and deeply felt rules, which now caused the priests and rabbis to be agitated and alarmed. The masses were turning away and the people were following a heretic, they thought. And so the throngs were given food and given the teachings which were given to me from my heavenly Father to give. I delighted in this time, and I freely gave my life to my calling there.

As the days and weeks wore on and as the numbers grew, the alarm was sent out to the rulers near and far and to the Jewish congregations who were now losing their constituency. How angry this made them and how outraged they were as they saw the numbers who left the church increase. They were alarmed and they were determined to stop this one who had taken their people and who they felt had destroyed the power that they had held so strongly there. There was talk of getting rid of him, this one who had caused such a departure to happen. And so the call was sent to find him guilty of heresy, to have the courts condemn him as a criminal. But there was nothing wrong with what Jesus, what I was doing. Nothing was wrong. It was freely that the people came, and freely they followed. No crime and no criminal was there to be found guilty.

But the movement of the people had so brought anger to the leaders there, that it was with deliberate intention they sought the death of me. I was told that my death would certainly happen and that I would be found guilty of treason and of serious and unforgivable violations of the taboos of the time. It was not without a sense of questioning that I turned to my Father, for it had been such a joy to share the good news.

Now the time of my death was approaching and I questioned why, why? And in the loving way of a father to a son, I was told that the death of the body is truly only a small ripple in the stream of life, and that my death on the Earth was to be thought of as a way to give the ultimate gift, the gift of redemption to the people. This was to be the precursor to my arrival again to the earth plane as one who had not died, but who had shown to the world that death can not take life, and that life is an ongoing experience never to end, but to be experienced throughout eternity. It was the gift of the life of a mission accomplished, to end with the return in the world as promised, as an eternal spiritual body, and as a live and enlightened presence.

Up until the very end I was teaching to the masses and I never departed from this. I turned to my Father often and felt his love for me and the safety and the security of a being held in His embrace. And so the trial and tribulation that came to me was shared with my Father, and with the love given to me forthwith, I was able to bear it all. For I had been told that the time of my death would surely be a time of brief and temporary pain for the people, for they would soon have me with them again as a resurrected one, a new body, a new life, which they could then look forward to having for themselves as they left the earth plane, their physical selves.

As the time of my death approached, I wondered about my family, those that I loved so much and who had felt such distress over my life. I wondered if they would understand and if they would be released from the bonds of tradition which held them so tightly and so cruelly. I wondered about them, for they had played such an important part in my life and I wanted so to have them learn of the truth of life there.

It was with sadness that I thought of them suffering and yearned for them to give over their fear and their distrust to the Father, the Source. For I knew that as they so did, they would learn of the love which was so abundantly there to care for them and shepherd them along the way. I turned to my Father and asked that they be given the spirit of inquiry, of curiosity to learn more, for it was only as they truly wanted to learn, and were open to turn inward into their very own souls, that they could find what I knew of so abundantly.

I thought that if I could speak with them in a way that they would understand they would open up. And truly, some of them were interested, and began the inward journey to liberation. These ones were at my side when the final words were spoken. Father, I commend myself to thee and I offer to thee my spirit. Into thy hands I commend to thee and into thy arms of love I do now go.

There were many who were there and who shed tears of mourning and the day was dark with the gloom of what some thought was the end of my life. Here I was in the time of ending, and it was now for me to let go of the bonds of Earth, and move forward. I remember so well that homecoming that was waiting for me as I ascended there. I was met with joy of a long lost brother and welcomed with open arms into the throngs on the other side. Now the joy was felt by me in a way that surpasses words, and the glorious reunion was had.

It was time for my last return to Earth and to the people whom I had left behind. I had the last lesson to teach and the last gift to give. I was not at first recognized, for many thought that I was another person. I had come as myself, but as one who had given up the mind set of struggle and had been now brought into sublime union with my spiritual Wholeness and therefore was as a complete one, a shimmering with love and light one, and this was at first unrecognizable to them. But as they heard me speak, and as I called them by name, they knew it was me.

Now was a time of showing to others that I lived, that I had not died, and that resurrection is for all, that the life of a body is not the end and that spiritual reality exists forever. Many saw and many believed. And as the time came for my departure into the realm of spirit to occur, many had experienced, the resurrected Jesus.

Now it was time for a new beginning to be felt there. For many knew of the departure of Jesus into the realms of spirit and had witnessed thereof. It was time for those who were touched by this to reach out to others and spread the good news. As those who were so moved departed into the countryside and into the surrounding areas to spread the good news of eternal life and the joy of living in direct relationship with God, the Father, there were others who felt that they had been given a way to live that involved staying home and bringing into the household, the new understanding of life lived in relationship. These ones were those who brought a new tenderness to raising children, and a new joy in the everyday duties of living. The good news of relationship that is directly available was indeed, not that which could be challenged by the ones in power, for the quiet living of this way was not easily detected there. And so the loving way of Jesus became known throughout the land.

Now I had given those who knew me, the teachings that I had been given as I had turned inward, and as I had felt the movement of love and the Voice for Truth inside. I had been given so much to share there, and it was truly a joy for me to have given this. What was intended to be an opening into the lives of the people to relieve them of the stresses and strains of their rigid obedience to the laws and customs of the day was truly what I had intended. Much of what had been taught to them was received by them without hesitation, for it rang so true to them in their hearts. It was easy for them to open up to receive, for the news was refreshing and exhilarating to them. As they opened up to receive they were so blessed. Many were healed of sickness and disease and many were taken out of the bondage of slavery to the rules and structure so harshly impelled into them.

Now the freedom of the people was joyous to behold and the life of true joy was felt there. What was it that was so transforming for these ones? It was the abiding spirit within them and the knowledge that this spirit of Wholeness, this loving and guiding spirit was ever present to turn to and to hold as one's own. Never alone were the people, and always were they joined by the comforter, the counselor, there. I rejoiced as I watched them and as I abided with them still, on the level of spirit, I rejoiced, and I joined with them as they lived.

Many came to know the risen Savior as I was called, and often the hearts of people were touched and opened up as they did so invite in and receive. It was truly for me, a delight to be with them, on the level of spirit. I shared in their everyday joys and in the sufferings that truly were eased as they turned to the inward love that was there for them. We were together, and in our togetherness, we were blessed. I felt them as they sojourned there and as each one left the Earth to enter the realm of spirit, I embraced them heartily.

Now the days and the weeks and the years went by and the ongoing involvement of the people with the risen Saviour continued. The small groups of like-minded ones joined together in small congregations and worshipped and shared together. These congregations were involved in loving sharing with the poor and the needy there. They were involved in helping those who were down trodden and were without resources to get through life. And so the mission of contribution to others was adopted by these small congregations. In this was a mighty blessing given, for it was as the people realized that all were brothers and sisters in the love of Jesus and in the relationship with the Father, that the true joy of living was felt.

There came a time when some decided that the rules of each congregation needed to be written down and that the history that was now being told by some about the days of Jesus was fast losing its clarity. Many felt that the emphasis on a way of living that included so much freedom, surely was not what Jesus had meant, for how could this much freedom be had and still allow for the work of contributing to be accomplished? Surely, the work of contributing to the needy and the poor far outweighed the frivolity of freedom that had now been misunderstood as disorder and dishonor, and the knowledge of achieving goodness and mercy and eternal life was equated with helping others and doing service for the needy. The concept of witnessing to achieve a place in the heavenly realm along side Jesus was what was strived for.

There came a time when the churches decided to allow those who were truly committed, to be ordained or delegated as special ones. And these ones were the designated leaders of the congregations. Now these ones were not in any way more holy or more important than the others, and they were truly not more loved than anyone else. Yet they were looked up to as somehow special or more important in the eyes of the people, for they were those who had somehow managed to give up the ordinary joys and freedoms of everyday life and dedicated themselves to witnessing, prayer, and renunciation. These ones were then designated as the decision makers in the eyes of the people and were felt to be closer to God. People would turn over their own will to these designated ones called priests, and soon they lost what Jesus had so purposefully given, the news of freedom and the good news of direct connection.

This change in the way people organized their beliefs caused the development of layers of hierarchy, and these different layers each felt they had control over a certain aspect of religious life or responsibility. And so the laity were relegated to be followers and often only came to ask the priests for penance, for forgiveness, there. It was soon found that this could be a way for the priests to bring money into the church coffers and so the idea of buying penance or forgiveness was developed. As the institution of the church became more fully entrenched into the lives of the people, the church lost its purity, for it centered itself in that it could trace its heritage back directly to Jesus. This tracing back and this lineage became more important than the message of freedom that Jesus had come so specifically to share. And the people again were caught in the rituals, the dogmas, and the traditions of a hierarchical system.

Now the people who were most willing to turn to Jesus directly and who experienced me, were those who made a decision to let their own wills, their own desires, be directed by what they soon knew was the inner Voice, or the Voice for Truth, the spirit within. These ones were often called mystics, and they were seldom viewed as normal people. They were the ones who enjoyed the deepest relationship with me, for they were the ones who had come to know of me fully, and who had shared their everyday lives with me.

Now came a time of rebellion in the lands as the royalty disagreed on what religion to hold as true. Fierce fighting and rampant upheaval crossed the land called Europe. Throughout the continent the period of fighting left thousands to die on the battlefields. Nowhere were there those who understood the depths of suffering and sorrow that this time brought throughout the lands. It was a time of sadness for those of us looking on from the spiritual dimension, and yet we knew that the death of countless ones could not truly harm the truth of what life really was, for the truth of life is the eternalness of life. Now as we saw the death of so many, we were deeply moved to help our brothers and sisters there. We were moved to help them and to offer them our assistance as we could from this level. The arrival of those who chose to return to the Earth to offer help was indeed welcomed, and many who were born at that time saw the need for change in the way the people were living.

It was at this time that the shift from redemption by works was enlarged to include redemption by faith, and the church was split into those that followed the traditional way of the lineage of Jesus in their hierarchy and those who let go of this and embraced a religion of faith in the name of Jesus. Here was a powerful split and there were many who left the old ways.

I can tell you as one who witnessed this from the spiritual dimension, that the intention to find the right way was felt there, and the searching was felt from both religions. In the time frame of that period those who searched were indeed few, for many took the faith of their churches and their traditions to be correct. It was a time of strict adherence by some and also a time of exploration by others.

Now the divisions among the religions were sharply felt and the people could not accept those of other faiths. And so the separation of people continued there and was felt sharply in the times of the day.

As the rifts were experienced, it was difficult for the true message of Jesus that I had given so many years previously, to be accepted and embraced. Few felt that they could reach the Father directly and few felt that they had any worthiness to ask for needs and wants. And so the prayers were directed to those who had departed and who had been the special ones, the holy ones, or to those who had been direct descendents of Jesus; my mother, my father, and those who had worked there with me, those known as my disciples.

It was truly a time of guilt and mortification which somehow was thought to bring about greater blessing to the suffering ones. Now this way of viewing life was, in all ways, not what I had taught there. For it was not the way of our Source to mortify ourselves or find within ourselves all that is bad and ugly, despicable and vile. And yet this is what was impelled into the people by the leaders of the churches there. There had been a misunderstanding of such great proportions, that we here who existed on the other side felt the desire to help mightily. We wanted to show the people that the need to mortify oneself and to feel miserable and guilty was indeed not the way the Father, the Source, wanted His children, His own to feel. For this was not the way of the Father at all!

How joyful we would feel when one would question the authority of the dominant forces there and turn directly to God to find answers. This was the way that we worked with the people. We would encourage individual questioning and curiosity and individual asking and searching. For it truly had to be an individual act of turning inward and asking for help, that the help could be given. Not in the masses, nor in the mortification could the answers be given, but in the quiet asking and searching, waiting and listening were the answers, the help, bestowed.

Now came a time of increasingly powerful political leaders who intended to bring the religion into the state and the involvement with the power to control the people was felt as the prime motive. The powerful felt that they were best able to move the masses by decrees and declarations involving religious ideology and religious injunctions. Here was the true corruption felt, for here was a deliberate and calculated move to direct the lives of people by subjugation to both the church and state.

It was then that I brought into the world significant help from the divine aspect to intercede for the people there. We worked to change the flow of the powerful and to let the new world be brought into existence. The new world was truly a place of enlightenment, for there was felt the influx of the divine in mankind again. Many who lived at that time found the means to bring into the world gifts of music and art and a social structure which heralded a more genteel life and a life of fine attunement to the inner sentiments of man. Now the time was right for a turning point there, and this turning point was welcomed by all. We knew that as mankind could embrace his higher feelings and turn away from the barbarian and harsh treatment of others, his life would immeasurably improve. And so it did.

Now the years of enlightenment proceeded and the time for bringing a way of life that was dedicated to the higher ideals led to an increased curiosity about how we were connected to our Creator and how the Earth fit into the universal scheme of things. The time of great discovery of the movements in the heavens of the stars and the planets was accompanied by a time of discovery of a new understanding of the relationship of all things, one to another.

As the mind set of a curious and open people was felt, new discoveries abounded on many levels. This was truly a time of shedding the barbarian ways and opening up to new and important discoveries. I can tell you that we, who existed on the invisible planes, were joyed at the new developments in the lives of mankind. With rapid speed the world became a place of widespread and far-reaching abandonment of the old and entrenched ways of viewing the world.

Now as this occurred, there was a parallel curiosity about the religious structures there. Some felt that it was time to expand the understanding of what had been given in the writings, the Bible there, and others felt that the Bible was the only book to turn to, to find truth. Here was a development of controversy that ultimately led to the Protestant Reformation.

At this time it became known that mankind was now not alone in his daily life, for he was met with the awareness that he was indwelt with spirit. He became more aware that his life was always accompanied by the spirit which could guide him as he lived there. Many learned of this as they opened up to what had become known as the divine spark, the inspiritus, which was there to guide each one. Many learned of this inner guidance and many found the comfort and the joy of the abiding spirit.

As the church became filled with those who had the awareness of the instilled spirit and as the church accepted this as the truth, a new freedom of religion was felt. Never had people felt that they were able to move and live as freely as during this time. For it was a time of increased awareness of the free will of each one to choose his life and his meaning as seen fit.

This was a time of new opportunity, for it opened up to people the creative and meaningful choices in work and religion and the use of one's time that was free of the necessity of hardship and duty which had been the standard for so many centuries. Now mankind could choose his vocation and his marriage partner based on what inspired him. A time of great and meaningful change certainly was what was experienced as the unfolding of events happened.

It was certainly a time of increased pressure to achieve some sort of prestige in one's work and in one's social standing. And as the masses were now able to move more freely into the educational and social structures that allowed for a more egalitarian way, the poor were able to move to the level of the educated if they worked diligently. A great leveling of people occurred at this time, and the middle class, the wage earning and educated, were now the majority.

As I had learned of my role in the movement of mankind into the awareness of the indwelling spirit, I had worked diligently to bring about a transformation, from a people that felt isolated on the planet Earth, and who felt alone individually and as a species, to a people who were aware of their direct connection to their Source, and to their universal brothers and sisters who inhabited the other planets and planes.

Now I had never forgotten my mission, nor had I abandon the people who lived there. I had witnessed life on the earthly plane first hand and I knew of the difficulties people encountered as they lived there. I knew, for I was also one of them, and I was one who had experienced pressures and stresses to conform and to let go of the unique and important mission that I knew was my true purpose there. I was one who truly had felt a calling to give a gift of myself and my life there. It was a time of joy for me to have been there in the flesh with you.

As the years moved forward, it was a time of continued abiding with from the level of spirit, as I worked to continue my mission of bringing all into awareness of the freedom, the love and the connection we have one with each other, and with our Father, our Source, there. I delighted in telling others the good news. And I have not let go of the ministry I have for you there. I am still working with you and I am still there to love you and embrace you as you journey there.

It was at the time of the great wars which had been seen as necessary by the powers that were in leadership, that I felt again, the increased desire to bring to people, a new hope for mankind. The death and destruction and the outcries that were pouring forth led me to turn my attention most fervently, to opening up the minds and hearts of man to attune to his spirit, his inner guidance, and to the love and intelligence that were his to embrace from his Father, his Source. Now it was a time of mourning for many, and also a time of searching for a better way to live, a better way to view the world, and to establish a harmony and peace among men. The injustices were great, as was the ignorance of a people, that knew not that to harm anyone, is to harm the whole.

Now as the years passed by and as the people recovered from the wars, a period of relative quiet pursued and an awareness that war was a painful way to bring the freedom to live that was so desired. It was a time of searching for the way to live that would bring about harmony and peace and a life of meaning to people there.

Now as these years went by and as the times began to change, the means to find meaning became filled with the desire to have the increased resources available that could provide the means to pursue a greater variety of experiences and opportunities to live a richer and fuller life. The equation of money with opportunity became entrenched in the lives of people. The pursuit of wealth became a dominant feature on the planet. Now it was thought that money could solve the great problems of the world and that if there were enough of it, one could truly give the attention that was needed to the problems that one encountered. And so the desire to earn more and to acquire more became dominant in the culture.

Now this was a time of great accumulation of goods and a time of seeming prosperity as many were able to afford the conveniences of life. This was a time of far-reaching willingness of people to extend themselves for the material things of the times. This willingness to extend for material gain, and the subsequent sacrifice of what could be called home life or family life, brought about a change in the values, the meaning of life.

Now as ones who truly understand the falsity of this way, it was with sadness and with dismay that we viewed your world there. We who have loved you and who know you as our own were in every way distraught to see you give up the love of family and the joy of togetherness for the subjugation to earning money to purchase material things. As the world was brought into subjugation by the dominant forces of the powers there, and as the people felt the loss of their freedom to engage in a diverse and broad range of life activities, the freedom which had been won by the wars was curtailed. Now the dominant force was to give the power of the financial institutions what they had demanded as they had pummeled into the people the desire for things and the desire for security through financial means.

It is now that we are at that point in history, and as we have arrived here, we will commence with the story that I want to tell. For the preceding pages were written to give you an understanding of how I came into the world and how the mission that I was given is still alive today. It is now that we can find out more of my involvement with you as we look at the life of a family living in the times you are in now.

Part II

The Story

Chapter 1

There once was a family that consisted of members who had as their name, the Christians. This family, who had such a name, were indeed not that, for they were a family which had chosen to live a life of disregard for the faith that they had originally been named for. The father, who had as his occupation, that of a successful and well renowned scientist, was reluctant to acknowledge any religion, for it truly was not his mind set to embrace that which could not be proven, or at least that which was not available to observe at some level. The mother also had given up the church, as she had learned of the falsity of some of the members, who had proclaimed the loudest of their devotion to its tenets. The children, of whom there were two, had thus been raised with little understanding, nor interest in the spiritual dimension of life. It was to this family that I felt drawn as I observed them living with such little belief in the greater reality of life.

Now the couple, who were in their middle thirties, were indeed what could be called sophisticated and were well travelled, and knew much of what the current affairs of the world were like. The children, in their early high school years, were looking forward to college and to beginning their life as young adults and members of their society. In many ways this family was a typical one, well-suited to the life they were cast into, at the early dawning of the twenty-first century.

I was interested in this family from my vantage point on the spiritual level, for I had observed that they had shown a remarkable ability to bring into their lives, a kind of diversity of expression and feeling, which was embraced and encouraged by all members. It was the mind set and the means that I felt most comfortable working with, for the curiosity that was expressed was refreshing to observe in the children and equally in the adults. There was an openness which came forward in the most difficult of times and when the tension was high in the family.

As the story opens, the family is caught in a situation of such intensity. It is revealed that the oldest child, the boy, has found that he is given the opportunity to join a group who has as its motive, to examine the fundamentals of the religions of the world. As a young adult of much curiosity in many areas of life, John felt drawn to a subject that had been basically ignored in his family and had thus created somewhat of a void, an unknown and somewhat mysterious area of life, which he knew was of such vital interest to others.

As parents who firmly felt that children should discover their own truths and formulate their own life paths, the parents were open about this interest on the part of John. The point of tension centered around the awareness that the ages of their children were ones in which deep impressions were made, and life choices were embarked on. It was felt that this group should allow for open debate with the parents of the members, for in that way, any off balance would be countered with the rational mind set of adults who knew better.

John's sister, who was two years his junior, was now a sophomore and was more interested in the members of the group for their attractiveness as males who would frequently visit the house and engage with her in a playful way. As Sarah expressed her interest in these young men, she too, became eager to find out what had been ignored and dismissed as not relevant to life. And so there was tension in the household as the group of young intellectuals met there on a regular basis and began the study of the earliest religions as they had decided to study the earliest first. It was to India that they were drawn, as they began looking at the Vedas, the writings of the earliest known religion.

From my vantage point, I was eager to have this experience open up to the family, the possibility for a new understanding to come forth. For it was my intention that they would discover what had been so long forgotten, and what had been so absent from these dear ones, whom I loved and whom I wanted to know more fully, as my brothers and sisters there.

The complexity of the religions of the East which so many have adhered to over the thousands of years, was truly a challenge for the boys to understand. They were perplexed and were soon ready to move on from the Vedas of India. As the group realized that they were up against ideas that were incomprehensible to them, they saw that they were now faced with a challenge that would be difficult to undertake, for they were not able to grasp the need for much that they read. They were not able to bridge the gap of their common sense which they had been taught was the intelligent way to understand life. They were ready to investigate, but not at this time ready to truly open, to what was before them. And so the Vedas were soon abandoned there and were replaced with the Talmud, the Jewish sacred text. This was also soon abandoned, for it was filled with rules and regulations which felt as useless to the boys, who were practically minded, and were not willing to go further with such a system as this.

One by one the religious texts were abandoned, and so it was to the Bible that they now turned. Here was the area of greatest interest, for it was here that the focus felt most practical and most related to their own lives. The Bible had been known to them and had been often referred to throughout their lives. But the contents which had only vaguely been understood now were looked at with a mind set of curiosity and a willingness to explore more fully. It was as the boys expressed their curiosity and as they began the study in earnest, that I was moved to bring about a thirst and a hunger for what they were studying. They were ready to find within this text an increased desire to understand and to gain in the wisdom which they saw within its pages.

I was moved to bring a spirit of unity to these sessions and the boys soon felt a closeness and a camaraderie they had not felt before. The five boys were eager to meet and they were soon filling each of their households with news about what they were reading and with the questions that had come up. Paul was interested in the creation story and wondered how this story of Adam and Eve was interpreted by his parents. Paul's parents had thought that the story was a mythical and made up tale which people had written to explain a mystery of profound proportion. They suggested the boys study Darwin and gain an understanding of the theory of evolution to counter balance this mythical creation story.

And so as the Bible led the boys through the old testament and into the new, there was discussion and dissention, debate and delight as the books unfolded before them. Now as they were ready to look at the book of Matthew and as they learned of Jesus, I was moved to begin a process of self revelation to them, for it was truly only as they experienced the love and safety and security of my relationship with them that they would be able to experience the transformative nature of existence.

Thomas, who truly felt that the new testament was written to fit the needs of the time, and was not an authentic view of what happened, was the most difficult to work with as his mind set had closed off more fully, but he too, was embraced and encouraged and abided with by me. I was eager to have the boys get to know of my relationship with them, and so I asked those on the spiritual realms who were working with each boy, his guide, to assist in this undertaking of bringing transformation to the small group. Indeed, the guides were at work also, within the hearts and minds of each one, encouraging and supporting and taking every opportunity to shed light on the words they were studying.

Now as the days went by and as the words filled their minds they were curious about this one, who was a boy like themselves, and who turned to learn more of his spiritual nature as he grew. They were curious about me and they were brought to a place of intrigue, for it was not felt that this person had been fully portrayed, as there were missing pieces in the texts. The boys wondered what Jesus had been like there, for much of what they read, led them to wonder about how this person could have changed the world so completely.

There were questions which were left unanswered and as the focus turned to the mystery of Jesus, for it was a mystery to the boys how his man could have brought such a radical shift to people, there was within the group a determination to find out more and to delve more deeply into the person of Jesus.

At this point I wanted to bring the group into the awareness of my presence there, and it was as I saw them quietly ask for answers, that I was so moved to make my presence known to them. For it was my desire for them to know the personal Jesus, the current expression on the spiritual plane of existence, and the availability to them of my friendship and guidance. It was truly an opening that brought me to let them know in the gentle way of a kind friend, that I was real, though not visible, and that I loved each one of them.

We, who exist on the spiritual dimension, were working mightily, and were intent on sharing the good news of the gospel to the boys. It was as they opened up and as they brought their curiosity into play that we would guide them lovingly into the conviction of the truth of what they were reading and studying. Each one felt that what they were reading now, contained something of worth for them and something of meaning.

John certainly was impressed with Jesus, for he saw someone who had courage to teach others even though he was harassed by his church leaders. John saw Jesus as a rebel and a person who undertook to share his meaning and his message to the crowds who were led into a jubilant and joyful new understanding. It was about freedom and it was about giving up the traditional way that felt so good and so meaningful to John. Here was a man who was not afraid to listen to his inner dialogue and act on it!

Paul thought that Jesus represented someone, who in a simple way, transformed the world. And yet, how was it that there had been so much destruction throughout history, as a result of the peaceful and gentle words of Jesus? Paul felt that the words Jesus spoke brought anger, because they were in direct contradiction to the mind set of control, which so ruled the world. And the others equally felt the strange contradictions of the church which was so led to bring rigid dogma and dictums to its members.

The group now had given up the study of other religions, for they felt their time was best spent delving into this person of Jesus. Who was he and how did he bring so much change into the world? I wanted them to know me and so I began a gentle movement which they willingly accepted and this was the decision to turn to the spiritual level, the level of prayer for answers. It was Stephen who first suggested that the group give it a shot. He had read of Jesus going into the hilltops and into the gardens to pray.

Now as the boys were open-minded, and as they were intrigued by the idea of a spirit world, they willingly quieted themselves, and with the sincerity of young seekers, they asked for answers. First they wanted to know if the spiritual dimension was real. Then they wanted to know if I was real and if I had been portrayed as in the Bible. It was John who began speaking through, as he had the focus and had been one who had learned to let his thoughts be released and allowed to empty out.

Now with closed eyes, the group heard John speak. He told them that he was speaking for Jesus and that he was ready to give them the answers they had asked. He told them to not be afraid and to trust that John was indeed speaking through, transmitting from the level of spirit. I then told John to tell the group that Jesus was indeed real then and now, and that his mission to free mankind was still actively being pursued even this day, that they were now learning of the truth of their studies, that Jesus was indeed, a transformer, and that each of them was too.

I then encouraged each of them to learn to quiet their thinking and to learn to ask for their guide and for me to come to them as they lived, for I would be with them always. I told John to tell them to not be afraid to explore more and I would verify to them my presence.

At the end of the session the boys were mystified, and yet they knew their friend John would not act nor play a charade, for he was as surprised as they were by the turn of events. For events, intention, had turned from studying the Bible to gaining knowledge of the spiritual dimension and the new realm that this opened up to them. It was agreed that for the time being, no one would say anything to parents or others, for the secret was in need of further exploration. It was with keen interest that the boys said good-bye that night, and agreed to meet again soon.

Chapter 2

It was with great anticipation that the group met the next time. There was disbelief by some, that what they had experienced was real, and it was with eagerness that they again turned inward and began the inquiry there. John, again in quiet meditation, answered their questions as I spoke through. It was Thomas who needed the most convincing, for he truly felt that what was happening was a product of their group think, their desires, and the subconscious of John coming forth. But he too, was willing to stay with the process, as it was filled with intrigue and with something new to them.

Now the group began the questioning in earnest. What was it like for you to be a boy in your time and how did you come to preach, to talk to the people there? I spoke quietly through John and told them that when I was a boy my life was filled with some of the same things they experienced. I went to school and I studied religion too. I had friends and I followed my parents in their desires for me. I came to tell the people about the freedom to live without the constraints of the church dogma because I had known since the beginning of my life there, that I was directly connected to my Father and that my Father, whom was the Creator of me and the sustainer of me, was always with me and was available to me directly. Because of my deep conviction in my own life experience of God, I knew that what I had been taught by my parents was indeed, not the truth. For I knew that I was free to commune directly and to joy directly with my Father there.

It was as I shared my experiences and as the Father spoke through me, that I was able to preach, to tell the good news of direct connection to the people that I met. Stephen then asked, “but how is it that you were not able to prevent the destruction and the death of so many throughout the ages who were convinced that they were following what they knew of you and of the church?” I then told Stephen that the death of the multitudes was truly unnecessary, but they were caught in the fervor of their leaders and in the false misconception, that to die for salvation, to fight and to die, was a way to achieve eternal life. I then told them that eternal life is the nature of life. It is eternal for everyone. There is no need to achieve this, for it is inherent in life. Then Paul asked about what the after life was like. I explained that the after life was much like the life that they are living, except it was not a physical reality but a spiritual reality, but that the physical was a part of life just as the spiritual is a part of life for them now, the greater part, the greater reality.

John spoke these words with the care of a good listener and then he too, asked a question. “Why are you coming through this way to us? Why are you telling us these things?” I spoke with the intention of a beloved to his own. “I am coming through to you five for this reason. I want you to know me. As you have met in your group you have desired to know this person called Jesus, to know me, and I also have desired for you to know me. You see dear ones, I love you and I want you to develop a relationship with me. For I can guide you there as you live life and most importantly, I can bring about the ongoing transformative nature of you. You see, you are meant to live, all are meant to live as people ever changing anew, ever unfolding into a greater and more fulfilling life. Throughout eternity this happens. It is the nature of life to be unfolding anew.”

Now Mark, who had been a quiet participant in the group and who had been an observer in much that had transpired, asked a difficult question, and one that I took some time to answer fully. “If you do not have to die to gain this eternal life, why did you die? Why were you killed and why didn’t you ask the Father as you call him, to save you so that you could go on preaching to the people there?”

All the members of the group turned to John in silence to hear the answer. “When I found out that I would die, I asked my Father why this was to happen. For I had loved my mission there and I had felt in true alignment with what I was doing. I was given this answer and it was the answer that put peace in my heart and it was the answer that gave me the calm certitude to go forward. My Father told me that I would not die and that the physical body is truly only a small part of existence which is encompassed by a spiritual body of light and love and magnificence. This body is an eternal body and is indestructible, existing always. I was also told that I would return as a resurrected one and share with those here on the Earth the good news of eternal life and of resurrection, everyone’s resurrection, into a being of light and love joined with the Father always. Now you have asked a good question, Mark, and you have been given the truthful answer. Now as we have talked a long while, let us adjourn here and return again later. I give you my love and bid you good-bye.”

The group now had a motive for meeting which took over their activities and helped them focus more intently on getting things done. For it was as they finished their school work and as they completed their chores that the boys were able to meet. The group meetings now took on an importance, for they were being given answers to questions which felt true to them and which felt as relevant to their lives.

But there were stirrings among the parents, for the usual questions which had been so prevalent at first, now were no longer asked. And the discussions which had brought such debate into the households were replaced with a quiet intensesness. As the days and weeks wore on and as the meetings became more central to the boys lives, the parents were quietly talking amongst themselves, and expressing concern for their children.

John's parents were concerned, for the quiet and apparent uninvolvedness of them, was disheartening to them. For they had enjoyed the debates and the dialogs their son had brought into the family. They observed that their son was acting with a certain maturity and a confidence that they were happy to see and yet foretold of a son ready to leave home and go to college.

Each boy's parents observed the changes in their child and they began questioning each other about what was indeed happening at these meetings which were now held away from home at a location unknown to the parents. Each thought the meetings were being held at one of the other boy's homes, and as it became clear that the boys were meeting at a neighboring park, concern developed. "What are you boys up to?" John's mother asked, and he told her that the group was still engaged in the study of religion.

Now came a time of increased meeting, for I had begun giving the boys information about the time that they were living in. For the time they were living in was indeed important on the Earth. Now there was occurring a releasing of the mind set of separation and an awakening to the indwelling spirit, inner guidance, and connection to the Wholeness of the creation as never before. I told them that they were involved in this greatest of missions, to tell the world of the connection to Source, to God, to our Maker, which is directly available, and that this news would transform each of their lives and eventually transform the world.

John and Mark now felt a purpose in life they had never felt before and Stephen, Paul and Thomas also felt a renewed vigor in life. Now the five were, each in their own way, brought into the direct communication with their guide and with me, and as each one turned inward I shared my love for them and gave them the sign, the unique way, that each one felt my presence within. The boys soon were finding that their movement, their decisions and their relationships were given guidance as they so asked of me to guide them.

But the parents still wondered what had come over their sons. The quiet joy that each one was expressing was felt as a cover-up and a discussion occurred at at least one house as to whether the boys were doing drugs. Now the reaction to the boys which truly was felt as concerning, caused the parents to come together for a meeting one evening while the boys were together. It was decided that the parents would call the boys together and ask for more information about what was going on and about the changes that had occurred in their lives.

And so the parents each asked their respective sons to meet at a given time to discuss what was happening there. As the boys talked about this they knew that the time had come to tell their parents the truth and to have the courage to let the good news come forth.

I assured the boys that I was with each one of them and that I would guide them through the meeting. Also, I reminded the boys that the parents were deeply loved too, by the Source, and were being worked with by their inner guidance, their spirit within, to awaken them; that each one was held as precious in the eyes of the Creator and of supreme value. And so the evening arrived and all gathered together at John's house.

Chapter 3

I had prepared each one of the boys for this meeting and had given them the calm assurance that what they were involved in was not delusional. As the meeting time approached, John was certain that the initial resistance to what the boys were hearing would soon fade and the parents too, would rejoice in the new-found way to discover the truth of life. John had so opened up to my involvement with him that he was now listening to me on an ongoing basis. As his life had felt filled with new meaning, John had turned to me again and again, and as the difficult areas of his life had been replaced with a calm ease and a peace about things, he had felt on the right path, on the beam of newness, and ready to move forward in his life. The other boys also had come into guidance and had felt the reassurance of the truth of what they were involved in and so it was a peaceful group of children, young men, that sat in front of their parents that evening.

Now John's mother began by asking if the group was still studying the Bible and what they had discovered. She expressed her curiosity because she had noticed a decreased questioning of her from John. John's father reiterated her question, but also said he was concerned that the group had taken on such importance. He felt that the family was taking a back seat to John.

John then began the direct telling of the experiences he and the group had, beginning with the joy and the peace that they were feeling as they had come into direct guidance. The room was quiet as the parents looked at each other. Stephen's mom, a psychologist, shook her head. She suggested that the group turn to another subject, say perhaps, science or history to explore; that the intellectuals should broaden their horizon to view the other areas of life. Mark's parents said they felt that the group had become too central to the boys and that it should disband for a while, allowing a more balanced life to be had. Thomas' parents, who laughed a bit at the whole scenario, let it be known that the boys were indeed being deluded, for what they had experienced was coming from their subconscious, their own minds, having nothing to do with the spiritual world of which they felt there was none.

As the group left that evening the boys were disheartened, for they knew that their parents were going to be less willing to let them meet and also now would scrutinize the behaviors of the boys. It was with a heavy heart that John turned to me that evening and asked what he should do.

Here was an opportunity to assure John that nothing could separate me from him and that he must continue on with our involvement and that I would guide him through each day, each moment. He was not alone there and that he would bring to bear on the situations he found himself in, divine intelligence from the universal level, from his guide and from me. I assured him that all was well, that he was deeply loved and that he could expect criticism from many places as he shared the good news of connection. His own experiences of guidance and the joy and the peace that the relationship brings, were what he should attend to.

As the boys called each other to arrange another meeting, the parents stern disapproval was apparent, for John was able to bring Mark into the ongoing study but no one else. And Mark too, was met with a great deal of resistance by his parents. The boys vowed to work within their own minds to seek guidance and to find their meanings. It would be months before they all were able to come together again, and in that time, each would have a story to tell of how his life had unfolded with the loving assistance of guidance.

Now the year was fast coming to a close and John was ready to graduate. He had chosen a college away from the town he lived in and had been in communication with me about this choice. It had been a choice to attend a small liberal arts college that had given his parents some consternation, for they had envisioned John attending an Ivy League school or at least a big university. They had wanted him to pursue a career in a profession such as medicine or law or in a profession that would prove to be able to support him financially and move him into circles of influence. They had felt he was a capable and intellectually superior young man and did not want that potential to be wasted. But they also were aware of his need for self determination and embraced that.

It was as John had turned inward and asked about his life, his career as an adult in society, that we had explored what the greatest use of his life would be. I shared with him the importance of listening to the ongoing unfolding of inner guidance and to take one step at a time. I assured him that he would know, as he explored with me, how to proceed.

Now graduation loomed on the horizon and the final days of high school came and went. It was a joyful and hopeful day that John left his hometown to travel the distance to his new college. Now the freedom that comes from letting go of the old and welcoming the new was felt and the small dorm room John found himself in seemed welcoming as a new roommate met him there.

Soon he was engaged in getting to know the other students and learning of his course of studies for his first year. I was with him through the decision making and the choices as they would come to him, and as he found the view from my perspective to be felt as right, he did so choose to follow guidance.

It was at a point where he was faced with a direction to take in his life that I told him of the purpose that he had chosen as he had first asked to come to planet Earth again. For he learned of the reincarnation of the body as it chooses to move onto the earth plane again as many do so choose. John learned that before he had come to Earth, he had chosen to bring to the people, a message of connection to his Source and to the presence of inner guidance.

Now as he heard this it resonated with him and he wondered how the life of a mission like this would unfold. Again, I reassured him that I was with him and that I was never far from him as he lived, always there to turn to and to abide with. John felt a peace as he embraced the news, and as he felt so right about it, for he had come to know that the life lived in connection to guidance was indeed, satisfying and meaningful.

I told John that he now would be in a preparation time and that his education was more about learning to ask and listen for guidance than about the actual courses he took. Now was a time to let go of the thinking which served to elevate his ego and make him feel as somehow different than others. Rather, it was as he learned that all were brothers and sisters and were a part of his family, that he could most understand how his Creator had intended. This message of the inner connection of all was of the utmost importance for John to understand, for it was as he truly embraced his others in school and in life that he could best embrace himself. It truly was in giving to others from the place of caring, that he could feel that connection most fully.

Now the days passed quickly and soon it was time for John to return home for winter break. His parents observed that John was unusually confident. He had appeared to them as having grown up in the brief time away. Their young son now appeared to them as a young man ready to embark on adulthood as he let go of the immaturity of the teen years.

John, who was always fun loving, was now expressing a serious side and seemed to know what he wanted to do. His parents were unable to learn of his mission though, for any talk of the group or of the religious life was dismissed and ignored. The parents felt that by not heeding the interest John had expressed, they could cause him to forget it, or at least disregard it as a passing thing, and so John decided to keep the direction he had chosen quiet for the time being, and to live the life that the family was familiar with.

But at night, John would turn inward, and in our communion I would give him the certainty that we were connected, and that he was indeed listening and hearing as I had told him of this mission to help mankind, and to share the wonderful news of connection. The joy John felt as he drifted to sleep was experienced by me also, as I loved this one, dearly.

Now as the days at home progressed, John felt a desire to get in touch with his friends, the fellow four who had meant so much to him and who had been there as he had first come into connection. A meeting was arranged and the friends welcomed each other with open arms. Each had gone off to college and had begun to formulate a direction to take in life, a career path. Mark was indeed going to be a physician. Thomas had chosen business and Paul was interested in politics. Stephen had felt a calling to be a teacher and was thinking of a degree in science.

Now they turned to John and as he told them of his inner decision to tell others about the direct connection to the spiritual plane and to guidance the boys wondered how that could translate into a wage, a salary and a profession. But they were not surprised about John's choice, for they, too, had been in connection with guidance as they had chosen their careers, their direction there. And so the five felt the camaraderie of good friends and agreed to get together at the next break.

Chapter 4

Now John returned to school focused on his renewed sense of commitment to listening and following inner guidance. It was a time to embark on a direction with John that would ultimately lead him to give his gift most directly with the greatest fulfillment for him and for the others who received it.

We were in a time of clearing away the debris of lifetimes of accumulation of erroneous beliefs and understandings and were now working with many there on planet Earth. John's arousal and opening up to guidance was now also occurring among many on the planet and the time of the great change over was soon to occur. It was a delightful time for us working with you on the spiritual dimensions, for we understood that the brothers and sisters who had been so long sleeping and unaware of their true nature, their true inheritance, and their true birthright as direct offspring, creations of the Source, were now waking up to the far-reaching truth of their existence. We understood that each one would soon realize that the culture and the conditions and the meanings that had been infused into the minds of the people there were erroneous and had little to offer for true fulfillment and happiness.

John now was faced with many circumstances that required my involvement and guidance. It was in the daily relationships that we worked together most frequently, for John felt a keen awareness that it was here that the differences, the gifting, could most readily be given. It was in the most minute exchanges with people that John began giving his gift. Each one he saw was looked at as a brother or sister, a part of the greater Wholeness of whom he was and this translated into an honoring, a kindness, and a genuine spirit of good will towards them.

The mocking and slightly condescending way of responding which was the norm for his age group was not a way that John responded, nor was it a way that he could relate to. And so the simple, straightforward and kind approach was rare on the campus. The caring and concern John expressed was a magnet to others, for they knew he was different and could be counted on to help them. John was in some ways avoided. He was not asked to go to the parties and the drinking binges, the wild sexual exploits, that so characterized the campuses of the day. And John at first felt left out. But as he brought this to inner guidance, I discussed with him at length the importance of keeping his activities ones in which he could honor his friends and himself, as this would ultimately be the most fulfilling for him.

I told him that he could count on my continued friendship and that he was deeply loved and involved with, that I would guide him throughout the difficult times and not leave him there feeling stranded and isolated and alone, that he would feel more connected, more congruent and more confident as he turned to our connection for the love and the support.

Now there came into John's life, a young woman who saw in him something very different, something honorable and kind. She saw him as truly authentic, an original and unique person who she was certainly intrigued by. As beautiful as Kara was, she had not let the norms persuade her to be loose in her sexual morays nor in her life style. She had found the spiritual dimension early in life and had prayed to God as she had had circumstances come up that were perplexing to her.

She had longed to find a partner who too, held her sense of love of the spiritual dimension and the God-part of life. John and Kara soon were together regularly and as John explained his connection to me, to our ongoing dialogue and to inner guidance, Kara embraced this. Now the days flew by and there was much happiness between them. I certainly felt wonderful that John had been blessed with a relationship that would bring him the opportunity for a real partner in life.

Now came a time of tribulation in John's life. He received a letter from home stating that things weren't going so well with his mother and father. They had long felt a distance between them and now were thinking that a separation would be best. A time a part, the letter said, a time to find out who each one truly was. Sarah would live with Mom and they would stay in the house. Dad would get an apartment. The news crushed John, for he had felt that his parents were stable and a couple that withstood the struggles that most couples seem to go through.

Now he called Sarah and talked to her. She was a wreck and crying miserably as she explained to John that the joy had gone out of the house and that the truth was that Mom had found another boyfriend. Now there was a sadness that overtook John, for although he was now an adult, he too, felt that a part of his life had been taken away. As he turned questioningly towards me in quiet, I relayed to him that each parent was truly free-willed and had to make choices in their lives; that no one knew what they were going through in the present marriage and that whatever choices they had made they would learn from them; that the choices would clarify to them, what they needed to know.

John's desolation left as we continued to talk about his parents and as he realized his most helpful attitude was one of acceptance and non-judgment. He called Sarah often after that and supported her as she came to grips with the situation. John had felt a sense of loss, but now understood that he could never lose his parents, only a picture of them he had fabricated in his mind, a story book idea which could now be replaced with the real experience that life was unfolding.

As the dream of the family unit was replaced with the relationship he had with each member therein, John mellowed in his approach to marriage and commitment. Now he and Kara were faced with the question of marriage themselves. There was a reluctance on John's part to commit, for he had thought that if his parents couldn't make it, how could he? Kara understood and agreed that to be in a relationship for a while, without the pressure of lifelong commitment was okay. However, she truly did want to be married to John, and held on to that hope.

John had come to me with this decision to not get married and I told him that he, too, had abundant free will and that it was his choice. However, to stay open to the unfolding of life and to possible changes in his attitude. Now as John had come to some peace regarding his parents separation he was again able to focus on his studies and his future there.

I spent many hours with him in dialogue about how his life would be brought into a series of events that would propel him into the spotlight. That he would be placed in a situation that would allow him to tell others most directly about the relationship with guidance. John was curious, but I assured him that what would happen would be met with the confidence of our relationship and with the safety and security therein.

John was curious about how life unfolded and had many questions about the inevitability of events. Were things preordained? How was it that I knew that his life would be brought into the spotlight? I assured him that the probable occurrence of things was there as was the certain knowledge. That life was unfolding anew each moment, and that his willingness and his intention were a part of the future and so his commitment to listen and follow guidance played a crucial part in the unfolding of events.

Now as life progressed, John became aware that he no longer held on to the need for approval from others. He had lived previously as one who wanted to feel significant to the actions and life he was living. Now he felt comfortable supporting others and helping as he could. The need for accolades was felt as superficial, for he knew that the true bounty, the true reward was in the ongoing relationship from the transcendent and in the very acts of loving kindness given to those in need.

It was truly a delight for John to offer help and assistance or offer a soothing word to a stressed fellow student. Life was now offering to him an opportunity to assist the more needy students and there were plenty of them there. Many students were overcoming trauma they had suffered in their lives. Parental divorce, abuse, isolation and emptiness were common among the students there. John realized that these were the ones who had at least been able to go to college, who were intact enough to at least get this far. He wondered about the millions of other kids who didn't have even the hopes of an education. The overwhelming social problems of the time wore heavily on John, for he knew the distress that he had felt when his parents split, and he was not sick with alcohol and drugs in his system most of the time like many of the students there. He was clean and sober and could still feel the pain at times.

Chapter 5

I was working with John and held out to him a vision of what would be for him life fulfilling, a vision of mission and a vision of relevance, to the times he was in. It was to the young teenager that John felt most empathy with, for he saw their struggles as they were dealt such a superficial way of living and such a meaning of insignificance by their culture. Here, to the young teens and the plight he saw them in, was John drawn.

He was soon taking courses in counseling and decided that the field of mental health was indeed, his chosen one. The courses he took were helpful but it was the direct connection to our relationship that provided the most important instruction for John. It was the communication of love, acceptance and gentle correction of erroneous ideas, that most propelled John to move forward with the decisiveness and the conviction that was so evident in him.

Kara too, felt a desire to help the young kids of the day, as she had experienced a broken home and had a brother that had committed suicide. Her decision to be a high school teacher was truly a calling to her, and the relevant thing for her to be involved in. Her heart went out to the struggles of the young and she was a patient and supportive listener.

Now the days of college passed quickly and the two, who would graduate at the same time, were looking forward to life in the real world. Now John felt a new willingness to be with Kara and began exploring with me the question of marriage. I heartily encouraged it and assured John that he would have what it takes to bring about a successful lifetime partnership with Kara. Now the joy of the couple was complete as the busy days of preparation for both graduation and marriage were lived. I was in almost constant communication with John and we together, made decisions about the choices of significance and meaning for him.

John, who had decided to have his four friends join him in the wedding party, now had the opportunity to spend some time at home with his mom and sister after graduation and before the wedding. It was a time of sharing with each other all that had been important during the college years. The others had all decided to move on to graduate education and wondered why John, who was so academically inclined, had not decided to do so. He was explaining to the others that his connection to Jesus, to me, was still very much alive and that this had not been what had been given to him to do. Rather, he had been told that he was to start a teen counseling center, and to begin the work of telling kids about connection to guidance and to offer support and assistance to them at this center.

John had shared this with his parents and they had wondered how he was going to fund such a project. Where would the teens find money to pay for counseling and how could he generate insurance payments without a graduate education, certification and the rest? The practical and day to day questions of living and making it in the world were what was concerning to the parents who had now lived apart for a while and were concerned about these things as individuals themselves.

John told them that he had felt conviction and guidance to do this and would walk each step of the way with guidance. It was the parents concern that John was being impractical and was giving up much potential that caused them to feel less than enthusiastic. But they knew their son had to lead his own life as they had had to, and so they adopted a wait and see attitude.

The small but lovely wedding which followed in the next month was attended by family and friends alike and the couple soon found themselves in a small apartment in the city of Portland. Kara had landed a teaching job at an inner city high school, and with the wedding money they had received, they were able to manage their bills. John had been in constant communication with me and had given the idea of a center for teens much thought and consideration. He asked me how this was all to come about and I told him to be open and to listen with intention. I had told him that the way would be provided for it all to unfold and that he need but listen and follow. Now the idea had been growing in his mind and he was eager to put the center in motion, but it was only after a rather unusual incident, that the project began to emerge.

The couple had been out looking for furniture and had stopped at a garage sale that had several antiques out in the yard. The woman who was apparently running the sale, told them that the pieces were from her home that was now getting too large for her in her elder years. She was ready to put the house on the market, but she needed to have some work done first, and was looking for someone to help do some maintenance around the home in order to sell. John, who was ready always to lend a hand when needed, said he would be glad to help her as they had some time on their hands before the fall schedule began at Kara's school. Kara also was ready to help this woman who seemed genuinely searching for help. The couple agreed to come the next day and take a look around to see what Ellen needed to have done.

John, who had helped his parents during his school years, was proficient at many tasks and Kara also was not afraid of hard work. The house was situated in the older part of Portland and in an area that was at the point of decline. Still, there were signs that the revitalization of the area was also a possibility, and that the numerous early 1900 homes with their unique exteriors and generous sizes could be easily converted into shops and book-stores, condos and restaurants. The area already was mixed with stores and there was an increasing tendency to condo conversion of the older homes.

Ellen, who was in her seventies, had learned that she had come down with cancer and wanted to move into a simple apartment. She had no children and few friends with the energy or the strength to help her. John and Kara vowed to help her through these difficult times and a great trust amongst the three developed. It was John who told Ellen of his direct communication with Jesus, with spirit, which had become such a life line for him.

Ellen looked at him with understanding. "I have known Jesus too," she said. She relayed to him the story of her youth when she was hurting from a failed relationship and had asked God to help her, to see her through, if he was really there. She had felt his presence within her, and had carried him in spirit as her friend.

When John told Ellen about his desire to set up a center for troubled teens, Ellen's eyes lit up. "John, I have been in communication with Jesus these last few day and he has said to help fulfill John's mission. I have been waiting to discover what that was and now I know. I would like you to use this house for your center. You and Kara can live here and pay me what you are paying now for rent. That will be enough for me and you may stay here as long as you like. If you continue to work on the house and fix it up you may use the large downstairs rooms for your center. I trust you, John and most importantly, I trust Jesus." The couple who had opened up to hear, were now given the message to take the offer and move in, and as Ellen found a small place close by to live, they did.

John was now faced with the task of setting up his teen center. He was unsure about how it would all unfold and what he could really offer, but he was determined do have as his main mission, telling each and ever one who came in about direct guidance from the spiritual dimension and the love of Jesus who is there today for them, for each one. I told him to bring together kids who were lonely and kids who felt isolated. Bring them together in the spirit of companionship and offer fun and friendship to them and the counseling will follow. Kara was in a unique position to see the lonely isolated kids and tell them about The Center. As she talked with other teachers and told them about The Center they too, were looking for kids that might benefit.

John felt that the friendship of one to one relationships was necessary for true communication to happen and for good connection to occur. And so he was intent on getting to know kid's names and something about each one. The Center was set up to be for individual counseling, but also there were game nights and videos nights for those that wanted to get to know others.

It was not intended to be a place of counseling that would give a diagnosis, nor center its mission within the confines of the mental health community. Rather it was a place of spiritual questing for those who seek spiritual answers. The mission would be a place of bringing to bear on the world the words heard from guidance in the hearts and minds of those who chose to embrace and open up to receive.

In the days and weeks that followed John was absorbed in the work and many young people found their way to The Center. Many of the youth who had been troubled by their life circumstances, were now given a way to find peace and joy in their lives and live with the complexity of their circumstances. Kara had begun her teaching and had found that to be a task requiring inner guidance also, and so the two were living the lives of ones embracing their Wholeness, their Completeness, there.

It was not unnoticed by the community. Those in the area came to know the friendliness and helpfulness of John and Kara and saw the changes in the teens who frequented The Center. But The Center was not without its critics. Because John was using techniques of spirituality, the secular counseling agencies saw it as suspect.

There was some talk of illegality because of the casual way in which it was run and the lack of formal procedures or guidelines in the work. It was difficult for the churches also, for there was no affiliation with any one of them, and so The Center was looked at with some suspicion. I told John to continue on and to disregard the talk, for it was always the case when one functioned outside the norm. John willingly followed guidance and willingly brought to bear on his circumstances, inner guidance.

There was much I asked of John, for he was led inwardly to begin the enlarging of his work to include adults and any who would seek to find spiritual meaning in their lives. Together, we wrote a small article about The Center which included the reason John had started it and what his mission was. The article included the invitation for all to come and experience the joy of inward connection. This was felt as news worthy in the community and the city newspaper ran the article. Now the phone was busy as people inquired about the hours, the fees, and the service.

John realized that he needed to have help in his office and so he recruited Ellen to come in and answer the phones during the morning hours. She was now in remission and feeling better than she had for years.

It was as the number of people grew to the point where the house was unable to accommodate the need, that John turned to me and asked for what to do, for people had found the news of direct inner connection to me and to guidance so experientially true, that they would tell their friends and loved ones about it. The waiting list to come in to see John was large and unwieldy.

I then told John that now the casual way would change somewhat and that I wanted him to think in terms of telling larger groups of people the good news, that he would now move into the position of a teacher with larger classes or groups, hearing what I would transmit through to him.

This news was taken into John's heart and he lived with it a while before telling Kara. But she was not at all alarmed and was committed to following the guidance that she had heard herself. She too, knew that in some way, the message would open up to the larger public.

Several young people who had been close to John throughout the development of The Center now took on the task of handing out flyers to the community announcing the first meeting. It would be an early evening meeting and held on a week day. I instructed John not to prepare for what he would say, but to listen for the words that I would speak through to him. This would require a great deal of trust, but not to be worried, for all would unfold in the perfect way.

Chapter 6

The evening arrived. The house was full as people sat in the chairs and spilled onto the floor. Now John began as I told him what to say. I asked John to ask the crowd to be quiet and take a moment to center themselves, to let go of the thoughts and worries of the day, and to allow for a peaceful experience to be had. Then I told John to begin by telling everyone that the experience of inner guidance and of direct connection to me, to Jesus, was available to everyone. That I was able to be in their minds and in the minds and hearts of all who turned willingly to me. That the movement that John had felt as he opened up The Center, and as he gave the direct messages of inner guidance to people, was his mission and was of the utmost importance to the planet. For the planet was in a time of change. The planet was now in a time of transformation like none that had ever occurred before.

Now mankind was awakening to his /her connection to our Source like never before. We are in the midst of a great change which will bring transformation to the planet. I told John that those who were listening to him were indeed, those who had expressed a curiosity about inner guidance and who had enough interest to be there this evening. Therefore, the movement was happening in them and being felt by them, in a strong and powerful way. Those that had taken the time to come were those who were also involved in the awakening of the planet to inner guidance and to the transcendent reality of life.

There was so much that we must learn here, so much that we have closed off from the truth of who we are. For we are direct inheritors, we are connected and we are meant to live from that connection. Many of those who heard this felt a surge of hope as John spoke, for the words rang true to what they had been experiencing. Many had turned inward before and had wondered about the feelings of inspiration that they were having. And so the first night of teaching passed and many thanked John for the words they heard.

Now the event sparked much interest there and the following week the crowd was even larger. Again, John spoke with the intention of a true listener and a true follower. The message of our Oneness to the Source and the availability was given again and again. As the questions from the group increased, each answer I gave felt so right to the questioner and to the others there. Now as the weeks continued and as the room was often unable to hold the crowds, the decision to find a bigger place was felt. No longer could the house hold the dozens who came and who eagerly awaited the coming week. I instructed John to begin looking for a larger space to hold his meetings. A request to the group was made at the next meeting and the people heard.

Within a month, a man approached John and told him of a large room in an older hotel which he owned, which he would make available that night of the week. As John and Kara looked at the large room, which could hold up to a hundred people with ample parking, John knew of our help in finding this perfect meeting place.

As I had taken the time to let John absorb all that was happening at such a rapid rate and had continued reassuring him that all was unfolding perfectly, he was able to take everything in stride and rejoice in this new unfolding. His fears of going before the group without a prepared speech were lessening and his joy at telling the great news of connection was felt strongly.

But as the events continued, there was an undercurrent of distrust developing among the more traditional groups in the community. Many were suspect of the growing numbers who were now talking freely amongst each other about the wonderful happenings which occurred every week. Many saw the events as blasphemous, as that which could only come from the Antichrist. For they were suspect of any tradition which did not use the Bible as the only word of God.

One evening, John and Kara returned to their home to find that the front door had been smeared with graffiti and had been covered with profanities. That evening John came into connection with me in a humble but perplexed way. "Is Kara going to be safe?" he questioned, and "What should I do about this?"

Now I reassured him that the feelings of hostility toward him were to be ignored and that the work was to continue. That my arms of safety were around him and were around Kara and that my grace and strength were theirs. That he was given a mighty gift and that the harassment was not an indication that he was in any way off base. Rather, he was on the perfect road there, the way, the mission he had agreed to. It was a peaceful sleep that night that John and Kara experienced, as John shared with Kara, the words I had spoken.

Now the couple was gaining recognition in the community and word was being spread about the man who spoke from Jesus. Kara, who was an excellent teacher, now was looked at with new eyes as students saw her as more than just their teacher. A student asked her to bring her husband's autograph to her, and she was often asked what it was like to be married to a man who talked to Jesus.

The principal who had been approached by a school board who was not sympathetic to John and his work, now asked that Kara not be given a new contract for the coming year. There was feeling that she was not able to allow for focused attention as the students were preoccupied with what was happening with her husband. This meant the couple would be without income the following year.

"What were they to do, and how were they to continue?" John asked in earnest of me, what he should do. The couple had lived on a single salary for the year but now were faced with the future of no income. John felt he needed to get a job so that the couple could live, could survive. But what could he do? He wanted to continue the work, the mission, but it was not something that people paid for, for it was freely given. But the couple needed money to live. The perplexing situation caused anxiety in John but I told him that the answer would be found there. Just to stay tuned and listen. His needs would be met.

Chapter 7

It was not long after that, that the couple was given an opportunity that alleviated the need for income. For the sad news of Ellen's death as she slept in her bed brought with it a surprise inheritance, which was inclusive of the house and some investments she had. Now the couple was more relaxed, but mourned the death of their beloved benefactor, who had been such a support to them.

As the weekly meetings continued, a new sense of importance was felt, for the number who attended the meetings was growing. Many people called and inquired about them and Kara was kept busy in the office with the calls. John was deluged with prayer requests and with those seeking inner guidance for personal problems. News spread throughout the Northwest and into California. Many now knew of John and he was often brought into the media as a new age teacher and counselor. But the simple day to day connection to guidance kept John moving on the transcendent path. There were speaking engagements and seminars in which John again told the good news of direct connection and the freedom to live a life of deep and peaceful meaning.

In an effort to awaken John to the larger movement of which he was a part, I began informing him of what was happening on the Earth. Now I spent much time in quiet with him informing him of the major changes occurring within the hearts and minds of man/womankind. For there was a significant lifting of the layer of illusion that had deluded people for eons. There was a shifting of the mind set of ego, of self involvement, to a mind set of connection. Larger and larger numbers of people now felt that they had a mission which they had been given to gift the world with. And many were aware of direct connection to their guides and to me. I wanted John to become aware of the change over that will occur during his lifetime and that the world would wake up to its connection, to the greater planetary Wholeness, its universal brotherhood.

As John heard these words he took them in and savored them. He embraced them, for they were what he knew was true.

Now he began the experience of seeing love in everything. It happened briefly at first. He would be looking at a tree and it would radiate meaning to him. Deep and vibrant light radiating and resonating love and completeness. He became aware that the meanings he had given things were totally made up and were indeed not the truth of what things were. All things were this deep love of which he was a part. He too, was this love. As the tears of amazement filled his eyes, he was overcome with a deep peace, a sense of right-knowing and a sense of completeness that far surpassed anything he had known.

I told him that he now knew what everyone is supposed to feel, that this was our natural birthright to feel this way, to be the presence of love. The spiritual reality John had experienced was meant to give him a taste of what our kingdom, our heavenly realm, is like. Also to let him know that it is available now, to everyone. No need to die to gain this, but to embrace and open up to receive this, as it is granted to you.

Now the conviction and the commitment to have everyone experience what he had filled his heart and soul. His love for each thing and each one he met was really experienced. He knew that God was in everything and everyone and everything and everyone was an expression of his Source. The joy of this realization was felt and abided with and I delighted in John's love and gratitude.

Kara had requested guidance from me also. And now she wanted to know if children were in their future. She had felt unsure of herself as a wife and mother at first because she had come from a troubled childhood. She had not been able to save her brother who had committed suicide and she had not been able to prevent problems with her parents. Could she be a good mother? Would she be able to give John her attention and have children also? These things weighed heavily on her and it was to me she turned for direction. I informed her that together, we would get through her life situations and together, we would face each thing. That she did have the capacity to have children and love and nurture them and also to be a good and faithful wife to John. Now that she was no longer teaching, she would be able to manage her work with John in the office and also to love and care for a baby. John also wanted a family and so it was not long after, that Kara conceived.

We here, on the spiritual plane, had been in counsel with that one who would go back to the Earth again and he had freely chosen John and Kara as his parents and their situation to be born again into. This one would live his life as an awakened one, and one who too, would give the gift of telling the world of inner guidance available to all.

It was a glorious day when the dear baby boy was born to John and Kara and friends and relatives were there to celebrate. He was named Mark and was healthy and robust in nature. Such a delight those first few months were as John and Kara felt they now had a family to love and nurture.

Now the call to bring to the world an expanded teaching of importance was given to John. We here, who knew of his willingness, saw an opportunity to transmit to him the teachings that had been so long suppressed and forgotten there. The weekly forums were now available on the internet and thousands visited his site every week. Additionally, the national media was becoming interested. And so the opportunity to give out the messages of high importance was there.

We began by informing John that the mind set for him to have as he gave these teachings was one of intention and love . That he must hold his consciousness in a receptive mode and listen with intent. That he must not filter the answers through his own thinking processes which would be tainted by his separated understanding and therefore would not be true. John listened as we coached him again and again. Now the “we” I’m talking about included John’s guide who was working with me, and many others on the spiritual plane who were aware of the importance of what was transpiring here.

Chapter 8

Now the time of giving to John the messages of great importance was at hand. And we started with the fundamental nature of mankind. I let him know that the meaning he had given to life was now to be enlarged and expanded and was to include a view of enlarged and expanded universal happenings. His view was to include the perspective from the Source as he was now in clear connection, as he had brought about a clearing of his separated mind set.

We began by letting him know that the Father, the Source, was in charge of things and that the will of the Source was what we here, who were existing on the spiritual plane, were moving to. We were in tune and we were following guidance also. We were aware of much more than John was because we had the transcendent view, the picture from the Infinite. But that he was able to have that view also, as he would open up to receive it.

Now John willingly listened as we began the lessons or teachings which would bring him into the flow more completely. It was for him to know that man/womankind were all created with equal value and were all of infinite importance to the Allness. No one was left out in the creation. No one was apart from the Wholeness. Rather, people had chosen to be separated, eons ago. People had chosen to self authorize and had forgotten their connection to Source. As they had forgotten, they had developed strategies to cope with, and defenses were developed to protect them from the vulnerability that they felt.

Now life had taken on meaning which was in all ways erroneous to what the Creator had intended. Life had taken on meaning and had been looked at as something to get through rather than something to rejoice in. And so suffering and hardship were often felt. Fear and its concomitant emotions of anger, jealousy, and alienation were the norm for people. The structures that were put in place to control people by those who wanted power and saw the need for this were dominant throughout. As time went on, people were searching for help and searching for something outside of themselves to give meaning to life and now the religions of the world developed. The tendency to want to blame something outside of themselves was created and the Devil, Satan, or the evil one was fabricated. Long before the Bible came into existence, the evil one, the Devil was thought to be real. And the stories of a war between good and evil was impelled into the hearts and minds of people.

The real struggles people felt were in fact, only that which they had chosen, and which they had been taught as how life was. Many ones came to the Earth to try and help. But the entrenched mind set had so ingrained itself, that few truly were able to let go of the ignorance of who and what they were.

John asked me about the death and destruction of nature. How could this be what the Source would want? And how could the sickness and tragedy which so plagued the Earth be a part of God, of the Source?

I told him that the laws of nature were put in place and were guided by principles, everything had principality and everything was a part of the intelligent design of the Father/Mother. Nothing happened which didn't have underlying principality. The idea of randomness was erroneous. For all things followed the will of the Source. The will of the Source was that life would inhabit the Universe and that life would exist without end. The eternality of everything was a principle and the dimensionality of everything was also a principle. All things exist multidimensionally, and all things exist and are held in the Mind of the Source, the Originator. It was as each one on Earth opened up to receive, that this multidimensionality would be felt in that one.

Now John wondered about the idea of sin and guilt. Here we were delighted to tell him about the innocence of each one. Each one could claim his/her innocence as a part of his/her inheritance. Innocence was a given from the Source. Guilt has been the biggest stumbling block to understanding there. John then inquired, "but what about the murderers, the abusers, the corruption that so plagued our world?" I told John that these ones also are innocent. Their acts have come about because of their ignorance of whom and what they are and as a result of not comprehending the Oneness of humanity. If they fully knew the truth of life, they could never conceive of doing harm to themselves or others.

As the teachings were given to John he felt increased commitment to giving his gift and to telling the world of the Oneness and the direct connection all had with the transcendent there, with inner guidance and with me.

It was after a time of our deeper connection and after a time of stillness that I told John about the next step he should take in his mission there. For we, on the invisible plane, saw that the message should be brought to the world community. John wondered how this would happen as it seemed that the world community would have a hard time embracing a man from Portland who claimed to speak from Jesus. But as with all the events in his life, John joined with me as the opportunities unfolded there.

We had now instructed John to begin writing down the words he had heard and to begin thinking in terms of writing a book filled with the messages and learnings he had heard and had given out. And as John had always liked to write, this was a task willingly undertaken. The early morning hours were free for John and so it was to the computer he was drawn. I instructed him in how to begin and to let the words flow freely. The book would be teachings or lessons given in a continuous format, with topics of current interest to people. He would start a business called the Foundation for Transformation, for what he was teaching was indeed the foundation for ongoing transformation for people.

As the weeks progressed and the pages mounted, John understood that he indeed had a wonderful gift to give people. The book would be called A New Beginning, Teachings for Transformation. Within the year the book was finished and ready to publish and it was as John began to understand the ins and outs of the publishing business that he decided to self publish. I took him each step of the way and soon the book was ready. Now John could sell these to his groups and give them something wonderful to take home and read and study. I encouraged John to continue writing as he had many books to bring forth. Together, we would do this, and together, we would gift the world.

The turn of events that changed the scope of his mission could not have been foreseen by anyone. The country had gone through the war in Iraq and was recovering from the recent terrorists attacks. The death and destruction had been huge. People were searching for meaning and purpose. The sense of vulnerability was great and the hunger for something to hold on to that could provide security and stability was great. Now the prayers of many were heard by us here on the spiritual level and we saw the emptiness of a people who found little comfort in the mass accumulation of things which had been pummeled into their minds by the media in a capitalistic culture.

The debt which many had, and the corruption of the financial establishments which demanded ever greater and increasing dollars to be spent in interests and fees, put great strain on the people and the need to work harder and longer was felt by many. Many could not find jobs and many lost their homes and felt financially insecure. There was a quiet desperation amongst the people and the hunger for meaning was deeply felt.

We, who resided in the nonphysical reality of life, wanted so to give out to people the good news of direct connection to us and to the Source. We wanted so to have people turn inward and listen with intention. It was our deepest desire for people to find the true meaning of life, the peace and joy of finding the fullness of who and what they are. I longed to abide with each one, with each one knowing me. I longed to show the love and to be in relationship there. For the awareness of connection must be experienced by each one for it to be meaningful in life. We are always there but we are not recognized or we are ignored. The principal of free will in each one is a part of the inheritance from the Source. That free will cannot be violated.

John had just finished meeting with the large group and had come home to Kara and Mark. As he was playing with his toddler, he heard a noise outside their home. Giving Mark to Kara, John took his flashlight and went outside. He was blinded by headlights as a car screeched through the street in front of their house. Pausing for a moment, John felt a sharp pain in his chest as the sound of gunfire rang out. "Antichrist, Devil monger" he heard, as the car sped by. John grabbed his chest and went inside, telling Kara to call 911.

As he lay in the hospital bed, I instructed John to relax, that all would be all right and that his wound would not take his life. He questioned me as the days went by and as the wound healed, why this had happened to him. I told him that all would unfold and the call was to trust into here and to stay close to guidance.

Now the event was covered by the media, and John Christian's name was known far and wide. Now many who knew him came to visit and cards and letters poured in by the hundreds. John feared for his family though as he was told there was a movement of those who hated him and of those who thought he was a blasphemer, a falsifier, and one who was out to profit from misleading the public. There were those in the community who now had drawn a line and had viewed John on one side and themselves on the other.

Those who believed that nothing from Jesus could come from anywhere but the Bible, were unable to embrace John and they ignored him or were intolerant of him and his teachings. The harassments continued in subtle ways at the bank and at the grocery store and in the community. Kara, who loved John and wanted to stay by him, also was overwhelmed with the insults and the violence demonstrated. And so, in discussion with John, she and Mark went to her parents to live for a while until things cooled down. John was in agreement with this, but was puzzled at why his life had been torn apart so suddenly and now he was alone without his wife and son. I assured him that this was a temporary situation and not to be thought of as in any way, a result of what he was doing, but rather, was a demonstration of the importance of what he was teaching. I told him to stay with and stay connected, as I was with him moment by moment.

Now the publicity had caused a great curiosity to be felt and John was busy arranging for distributors to get his book into the book stores. An agent approached him about translating his book into French and German and he agreed. Now the days were busy as John had much to arrange and negotiate there. But he stayed close to me, and together we made the decisions which would best bring to the world, the good news of connection.

Chapter 9

Soon thereafter, Kara and Mark returned home and life became normal again. John felt that the experience he had with the gunshot wound now could be seen as that which brought the word, the news of the books, to those who were curious and those who had expressed some searching for answers there. But now there was more trouble or uncertainty in the family's life. For the notoriety had placed the family in the spotlight on a regular basis. No longer could a simple trip to the grocery store be made without people noticing them.

The decision to sell their home and move to a more rural part of the state was made. In this I supported the family, for the need for privacy was important for John, as he was now at a place of writing another book. We together, chose the rural farmhouse and the acreage that allowed for the privacy so needed. The journey into the city on the evenings of the meetings was easily done.

Now I gave John constant verification each step of the way, and I let him know that he was on the path, the perfect place to be as he lived. This meant so much to him, for he soon realized that his relationship to me was in all ways, the most important thing in his life, that he was unable to feel good about anything unless he had checked it out or turned inward and connected with me first. And this was done in a quiet way, a way that was unobserved by others there.

It involved a mind set of asking for connection and then being open to hear. I would give him the sign that was his and let him know that indeed, we were connected. And I would verify in words to him that his choices were on target or not as the case may be. Now this method of living felt abundantly clear to John, for it was so satisfying to feel the right knowing which accompanied what he did. In the simplest things and in the more substantial decisions, we were connected. And so the exercising of his body and the eating of the food he and Kara prepared and the playing with Mark, all were done with the mind set of connection there. The love

John felt for his family and for his involvements there was truly the reward he most experienced. The fame and the wealth which now had come, was not as satisfying to him, as the love for family and friends. Most importantly, John felt a love for me and for our relationship. I had not been without the same feelings, for I loved John and Kara and little Mark, also. I felt deeply connected to them and loved these dear ones, mightily.

As John turned inward to me, I let him know that he would be giving a gift of significance to the world. That the mission he had begun was far from complete, for it involved many more books to be written and published. The Foundation for Transformation was indeed that, as John received many letters of appreciation and gratitude for the wonderful work he was doing.

I told him that the next book would contain teachings that were indeed more expansive than the first. This book would be about the new beginning that was happening on the Earth and would include pertinent information for what people could do themselves to further the releasing of the mind set of limitation which so plagued the world. It would be a book of changes which would come about from the releasing of the ego framework and allowing for the natural self, the original self of each one, to come through.

Not in imposing something new, but in allowing what was already there to come through, would the changes happen. Soon the masses would be feeling the movement within and the curiosity to know more of the multi-dimensional realms would be felt and at that time John's book would fill the need. His was an integral part of the plan, the unfolding. His piece of the work was that which could only be done by him and that each one's mission was that which could only be completed by that one. So the importance of each one and each one's mission was paramount.

It was at this time that the teachings we were giving John had a relevance that far exceeded the physical reality he was familiar with. For the teachings now turned to the activities of those who were working so diligently on the spiritual plane. I informed John to write about the guidance that was given to each and everyone from his/her guide. To inform each one, that they have a guide who is assigned to them specifically, whose mission is to bring about the awakening of that one to his/her divine connection, to his/her Allness, Wholeness, there. This awakening was uppermost in each guide's mind/ involvement and to bring about fulfillment for that one. Each one's guide has a name and an identity and knows you intimately. This guide was a profound resource available to each one to guide that one through life and through the many choices that one would make. The guide would provide the transcendent view which takes into account the Whole of the movement that one was involved with and therefore, could provide for the best outcome, for all those involved in what that one was involved with. Now as John heard this he asked “What about the many who had died listening to God? Is death ultimately what will happen?” I then told John that true life is what will happen, for life is the will of the Source. Not in death, but in fulfilling life, is the Source’s will brought into being.

As we worked with John, we outlined to him the important teachings which all need to know and which have been forgotten there. For inner guidance is of the utmost significance there to man/womankind. It is in turning inward and listening that true information, intelligence, and the knowhow to move forward, is heard.

Now came the time for giving to John what we knew would prove to be of the utmost importance to people there. For we told him that the time to turn inward now, is of critical importance. The time to turn inward is now, for as events unfold, it is for people to have come into relationship with their guide, to learn of the way to traverse the times ahead. Now ahead, is a time of tribulation. Now ahead, is a time of need beyond what people have known and is a time of increased hardship as the mind set of limitation moves so mightily into the events there.

I can tell you that the times ahead will call on each one to learn of how to move, to proceed there, with the knowhow that will allow for the least difficulty to be felt. But to wait is to forestall the certain knowing, which must be felt to be lived. And so it is imperative to teach the way of the transcendent to others there. It is imperative to let others know of the simple direct link to the Oneness available to all.

Together, we developed The Book of Changes that would teach the steps necessary to move into direct guidance. We listed in order, the simple method of connecting to our guides and to me. Now a handbook of means to connect was created and in the simple and direct way of a lover to his or her beloved, the words were spoken.

The Book of Changes included the methods and the means to get in touch. What safety and what security this provided to people. For it gave to each one who read it, a tried and true method of getting in touch with guidance. As John completed this work, he knew that the information, the love shared here would change the world, and so he felt humbled as he finished the manuscript and thankful that the gift was being given.

Chapter 10

Now the days passed quickly and Kara and John rejoiced in the love of each other and of little Mark. The baby was growing strong and was now in the stage of curiosity about everything. He would inspect the gardens and fields and savored the blooms and the breezes. He was beginning to talk and was interested in the way things worked. Kara and John were kept busy trying to answer all his questions. At night the couple relaxed into bed and slept soundly as they were so thoroughly tired from the raising of a hearty and fun-filled two-year old.

I continued to give John the important teachings that had been so long missing from the people there. Now we began another book. This one was truly meant to open John's mind to the existence of other beings and created ones on the other realms of existence. This was given to him with the intention of broadening his awareness of the multiple and measureless existence of life, that so fills the universe on the many dimensions, that are a part of each life. Now as John heard this, his curiosity was such that we here, decided to give him some of the experiences that he was seeking, to know more of the multidimensional reality that was a part of each one. We here, were delighted to show John, in an experiential way, what we were telling him.

At night after Kara was sleeping and the house was quiet, we instructed John as he so was willing, to ask to be taken out of his body. For the physical body is indeed, a fleshy and impermanent body, which is in all ways a temporary experience. The fleshy body is home to the spiritual body while on the earth plane, but the spiritual body of light lives on eternally.

Now the moment when John left his body was startling to him and he indeed, experienced fear. For to be out changed the reality of life, which had been so familiar for all his days. The moment of returning into his fleshy body and knowing that it was real and that it really happened brought about an opening into the spiritual realm, the multidimensional realm for John. Now the words we spoke through to him had an even greater impact, for they were accompanied by direct experience so joyfully felt. The words we told him at that time were words that gave him renewed vitality to continue on. The words were this. You have much to do there, much to bring forth. You are fulfilling your mission and we love you.

The next day John told Kara of his out of body experience. Now she was faced with learning to accept her husband's experiences, which made her wonder if John had gone too far. But his level-headed and continued involvement in life and in the family, convinced her that these were real, and that John was not going into some sort of psychosis.

John began to see relationships in events and in the smallest of things. He began to see that each event, even the smallest, was moving him forward, opening up to him, meaning and joy. Each event was felt as filled with the potential for experiencing again, the love of the Source. And so the bringing to bear on all things, the awareness of connection, had meaning that surpassed what he could have ever imagined. The joy of life and the Wholeness of life filled him.

No longer was there a yearning for more, for the yearning to experience more or greater happenings was gone. The completeness and the fullness were felt on an almost continual basis. And so the movement that John felt himself in was one of relationship and listening. He learned that the opening up to greater fulfillment, was in turning to inner guidance, to the loving relationship with his Infinitude. John now saw that he had lived for so many years, a deluded and far fetched understanding. That the culture was truly mislead in their understanding of how things were. And so the importance of sharing the good news, the greater understanding swelled within him, for it was so obvious that this news was the most important thing to share, to do there. Happiness and joy, peace, contentment and fulfillment were what John experienced.

We together, worked on the books and we together, did the daily chores, the necessary life tasks that all do. Together, we took care of Mark and together, we loved Kara. Joined always was I, with this wonderful friend, who had learned of the joy of our intimate and meaningful and natural connection. As the movement with John continued, I encouraged him to think of his life as a beacon of love to others, that his life was meant to point the way to those lost in the storms of life, and that he could truly move as one who knew the answers there. For the movement of one who knows the truth of life is the movement of perfection, of purity, of peace and joy, the movement of fulfillment. That was the message of most importance that John must share, the message of inner guidance and fulfillment. The message of peace.

As we continued working with John and as we saw that he had released so much of his mind set of separation, we endeavored to share with him that which would impact the greatest number for the greatest good. We had taken into account all those who were open to receive what John would bring forth, and we spoke to him with the foreknowledge of this. It was a time of giving to John, that which could be taken in and allowed to be absorbed and integrated into life. We saw that the news that would most benefit the world was the persistent verification that guidance was available and readily there to be accessed.

It was the persistent and affirming message which so needed to penetrate the minds of people living there. For it was in the turning inward and the allowing for the Voice for Truth to be heard that the forward movement of a derelict people could begin.

We spoke to John in a way that he and others could understand and this way was the way of analogies. Let us look at the analogy that was most suitable to bring about the understanding there. An analogy is that which likens one thing to another. It is in the comparison and the similarity that the analogy can be best made. Remember that the analogy is only something meant to shed light on the thing talked about rather than be a descriptive comparison of the real thing.

It was a sudden snowstorm that prompted us to tell John about the situation people are in now. As the snow piled up on the landscape, John and Kara were house bound. Cold frigid air poured in from the East and the days of stormy weather continued. Nowhere, could the couple go. They were now in a situation of limitation that made them look at what they had to protect themselves from the isolation they faced. They took stock of their food supply and their heat source. They looked at their water supply and also looked at strategies to take if things were delayed from thawing out or moving to more normal circumstances.

In this situation we were able to show John what the state of the population there was like. Like the snow that fell, people's mind sets had frozen and become limited. People had assessed their danger, their vital needs and had developed strategies, defenses, to cope with the unforeseen. But beneath the illusion of real hazard was the normal, natural and ongoing flow of life happening. We here, were in the process of thawing out the snow, of allowing the illusion of separation from the natural self, the joined self, to be melted away. The frozen pipes had begun to thaw but the potential for breakage was there as the hold on the familiar was let go of. And so the call was to persist in the thawing process and let the fallout, the broken pipes, the chaos, happen as it was necessary for the ongoing truth to come forth. It was as the warmth of connection, joined the frigid, cold, isolated mind set of separation, that the natural, flowing intelligence, the peace and joy of living, could be felt.

The clearing out process would take some time and would take some persistence, but the movement to awareness to connection was now being felt on a much greater scale and as the masses became aware, the free flowing steam of life, love, and intelligence would come rushing forth, never again to be frozen in the stasis of ignorance.

It was several days before the melting happened, and indeed, some pipes had been broken. But the repairs were made and life soon returned to its normal, happy flow.

Chapter 11

As spring approached John felt he needed to bring to the people a renewed vision of what life was meant to be. He had now experienced the transcendent through numerous ways and had been brought into the spiritual dimension directly. We here, also wanted John to let the people know that the spiritual realm is one not to be afraid of, and not to think as far off, but to incorporate into life here in the third dimension, that the information, the knowing, that comes from living from the connection to the transcendent can bring about the vitality, the transformation of life on an ongoing basis; that life is meant to be ever changing into greater and greater fulfillment, fullness, as intrinsic to it.

The stasis that is so often felt on the earth plane, the boredom and the depression, are antithetical to the nature of Source. We wanted so to let the people know of the blessings so available to them as they joined with their Wholeness there. For the clouds of illusion had so blinded people, that the true nature of life was forgotten and abandoned.

We felt so strongly about this and we were working so diligently with John and with the others who had opened up, that the releasing was occurring at a rapid rate. Through the dun and the din of life, the clear crystalline tones of awakening could be heard, and we rejoiced in this.

John now dedicated himself to the writing and the teaching as never before. His commitment was truly important, for it is an ingredient, a necessary precursor for undoing, the letting go, the releasing of ignorance to happen and for John's mission to be given. As he worked tirelessly and felt the renewal of spirit and energy, he was blessed. It was with delight he worked and with delight he persevered there.

As spring brought forth the flowers and grasses in the fields and as the soft breezes wafted their sweet fragrance, the renewed energy of life was felt throughout the country side. Now the birds were busy building their nests and the little bunnies were seen following their mothers in the fields.

The couple soon felt the desire for another child to add to their family and Kara found herself looking forward to a new baby to be born around Christmas time. Mark was able to understand much at an early age, and the parents were surprised by his grasp of things. He had begun the observing of the birds in the area and could identify them by names, learning their songs and their habits. His curiosity extended to questions about the stars and the sun and the moon and to the wonderment of his mother getting bigger every day, and the potential for a new brother or sister therein, to play with.

Kara found herself engaged in preparations and the couple now felt the need for additional space for the baby. It was decided to turn the large attic space into an office for John and let his current office become a nursery/play room. The couple enjoyed the planning and as they were ready, a contractor was found and the work began. Mark loved to see the men working on the attic and had numerous questions about building. At night, after the men left, the two would walk hand in hand up to the attic and survey what had been done during the day. John then told Mark about a carpenter that lived long ago who also loved to build and who also loved the stars and the sun and the moon as Mark did. John told him about me, and Mark seem to joy in hearing about my life as a boy. Questions about Jesus were now regularly asked, and I delighted in this small child and his desire to know more.

The summer days passed and the attic project was almost complete. The large windows framed a rural countryside and let in the light of day and the star-filled heavens at night. The space was big enough to meet the needs and to offer a quiet place for John to work. We together, delighted in this, for it met the need perfectly.

I arranged for what was soon to become ongoing meetings on the spiritual plane with John. And so at night there came into John's consciousness, meetings with those who were involved with him. We told him of the occurrences that were happening, the events that were bringing to bear on the mind set of people, the opening for a new way to view life. We shared with him the direct and immediate steps he needed to take, to follow, to bring about his mission there.

John knew with a certainty, that he was moving to the will of his Source, and he felt convinced at each moment, more and more. Not a thing of tyranny nor of coercion nor of imposed direction, but rather freely always, was John moving and freely always, did he so follow. For the guidance was there for him only as he was willingly and with conviction, desirous of following.

This is the way we work with people, always letting them know that it is freely they can follow and freely they can heed the messages of inner guidance. Any resistance was patiently abided with there and until the movement was willingly agreed to. Nothing was done to cause harm or to cause problems for John. Only as he was convinced with his whole heart and mind, and only as he saw, through increased experience of inner guidance, did he know, that what he was following, hearing, was the truth of things.

The importance of this cannot be overstated, for the free will of everyone is an intrinsic part of that one, an aspect that cannot be overridden by us as we work with you. The night time experiences of connection to the many who were working now with John, left him aware of the importance of his mission, for he wanted everyone to be as happy and joyful as he was, he wanted all to have the same peace and fulfillment in life as he was experiencing.

It was now time for the new baby to be born and as she arrived into the world, we here, knew of her desire to give her gifts to the people there as she would come to understand as she grew. She had chosen John and Kara and little Mark as her family and she had chosen the time and the circumstances of her birth. Now the family rejoiced at her birth and Mark saw for the first time, his sister and playmate.

She was named Mary, and we here knew of the lives she had lived before and of the potential she held within. Mary was healthy and resembled her father, but her attention almost immediately was drawn to Mark, her brother, and it was to him she began an adoration. Tiny eyes and tiny smiles, tiny hands reaching outward and tiny gurgles of joy would come forth as Mary observed her brother Mark. He would prove himself as a devoted brother now and throughout her life.

Chapter 12

The story of John and his family is one that sheds light on much that is happening in your world. Many now have come into the direct connection to guidance and have found the renewed vigor to joy in life and to bring to bear on the circumstances they are in, intelligent and loving guidance from the transcendent level of experience.

Let us pause a moment here, and let us depart momentarily from the story and turn to what may be happening in your life. For this book is written primarily for the purpose of bringing you into your direct connection. It is time for you to think again about your life and to think again about the purpose you chose as you reentered the third dimension, the earth plane again. For you have a purpose there that is beyond what you think it is, a purpose you chose as you counseled with your advisors on the spiritual plane. You were dedicated in your return here, to bring the news of direct connection to others, as this was clearly the most important thing you could do for your brothers and sisters here.

Now you are at the point where you are feeling the inner desire to explore more fully what this looks like in your circumstance. And you are truly wondering how your life should unfold there as you live. You are questioning the values that you have been given, for they do not bring with them the sense of completion and wholeness, the satisfaction so promised. Money, prestige, relationships, all have their place, but ultimately, they hold little meaning without the purpose you incarnated here for, being felt and lived. For your true peace, your true fulfillment, can only be felt as you live fully joined, in mind and spirit, with your inner guide, with me, and with the others who are working to bring you into awareness of whom and what you are.

Now the tides of time are turning and the news of the truth of life is coming forth fully. How joyful you will be as you discover that your notions of fulfillment are erroneous and how joyful you will be to find the delightful understanding of the truth of you. As more and more open up to receive and as more and more let go of the illusion of the past of a separate existence, you will be redeemed and refreshed, renewed and reinvigorated. Joy, peace, and happiness will abound there.

But there is a persistence that is necessary for you to let go of the old ways. For the entrenched mind set is, the ego framework is, seeking to have you ignore and forget this truth, for in forgetting, you will reinforce the ego which is intent on fortifying itself. Now the ego truly is nothing to consider as a person or as an entity there, but rather, a system of strategies to insure its continued existence. A system of entrenched methods, defenses, that have so worked their way into the psyche of mankind that they seem natural and as that which is real.

But indeed, they are artificial and made up. They are not the truth of you. For you are much more. As you let go of the illusion of separation, you will move lovingly into the natural you, the original you, who you really are. Now the time to open up is now. The time to let go of the defense is now, and the time to invite in your inner guide is now. I am here for you and I love you. I have not left you there, stranded in the cold and lonely world, without a lifeline, a help line, to direct you specifically.

Truly, I am there for you, dear one. Truly, you are not alone there. Now is the time to come fully into awareness and allow for the letting go of the illusion of separation. We are one here, now and forever. Never alone and I love you.

Chapter 13

As Mary and Mark grew and as John and Kara embraced the joy of family life, we continued to give the wonderful news of direct connection to John and to share with him what was so needed there. For the world which he was living in, was a world that had subjugated much of true value to the quest for material goods, and for the ease of life which never truly gave meaning to people.

Many who had thought that money was the keystone there were now faced with the dissatisfaction of not having peace and feeling empty. Many, who had forsaken family values, and had turned to the corporate world for validation, now were suffering from the boredom and emptiness which accompanied this false and fickle fallacy. For the people were deluded into thinking that the superficial needs of the body and the desire for what was so evidently erroneous, now were facing a crisis in meaning.

The loss of the gentle and caring spirit which was indeed the birthright of people was now looked at as that which signified weakness. Many who were brought up in the cultural values of the day were harboring an emptiness and depression of significance. And so the means to alleviate this which were pummeled by the media and into the minds of people, were that of substances and methods which involved escape and medication. Alcohol and drugs and the fabricated measures of indulgence were tried, but the emptiness had not gone away.

The people had deluded themselves and had opened up to the power of the media to chart the course for them. Many were left without ever knowing of the spiritual side of life, the inward and still, small, Voice for Truth that lives and abides within each one. Many had never heard of this and were left without the means to find the true place of peace within. And so the mission that John found himself in was truly of the utmost importance there for people. We, who were working mightily with him, told him of the continued need to write and teach there and of the great service he was providing to his brothers and sisters there. And so the conviction increased as John saw the benefit of the teaching and the writings.

So many now had called him to talk to him and to thank him for the gift he was giving, that John knew that his work was being felt within the hearts and minds of people. It was truly a time of great output, of listening for John, and he worked diligently to bring the word into the third dimension there. I encouraged him to think in terms of a lifetime of giving, a lifetime of writing, for that was what we had in store for him as his mission.

Kara and the children now gave time for writing to their father and husband, the time he needed to work on the books and the time he needed to rest and rejuvenate. Together, the family played and enjoyed their rural life in the country. As the children grew, there was now much that John taught them, and as he witnessed to the love of the Father and of the abiding spirit within, the children grew in their faith and love for Jesus.

One day Mark came into his Dad's study in the attic and said, "Dad, I talked to Jesus today. He told me to talk with him whenever I wanted too. He told me to think of him as my friend. I think he wants me to talk with him a lot and I will." John smiled as he heard this, for he knew that Mark now had become aware of his connection, and had opened up to hear.

Mark was now ready for school and the joy he felt at learning was openly expressed. He was given much encouragement and so he eagerly awaited each day. It was not long before he was reading with the proficiency of a much older child. He would read to Mary at night, stories from the library that they had selected together, and then he would tell her the Bible stories he had heard Mom and Dad tell him. Mary loved this and looked forward to her time with Mark, after the evening meal before bedtime.

The two were close and seemed to avoid the usual sibling rivalry so apparent in so many brother and sisters. The two especially loved to talk to Jesus through prayer and often asked him to be with them each day. They were good at thanking him too, and the word "thanks" was often heard in the household. Kara had developed a small group of neighbor friends whom she invited over often and these friends, who lived close, were often brought into the life of Kara and John. Kara felt the joy of living in a small rural community and as many of her friends were Christian, and as John's work was from Jesus, the friends did not find it too difficult to relate to the family. Many had read John's books and felt an opening in their hearts as they heard of the availability of Jesus to them.

As the days progressed and as John felt the ongoing inspiritus, he brought forth much in his writing that was new to the world. Many had thought that the world was singular in its expression. But the world was one of many such places, expressions, throughout the universe. The world was one of a number of planets that were involved in the awakening to their connection to the Source. We were involved in the ongoing work of giving to many, news of the direct connection to inner guidance, and the involvement one to all.

Now the world you dwell in is one that has a purpose there of immense significance, for it is a world of those who are felt as carrying the promise of a gathering and resounding movement of clarity to the symphony, the chorus of the Source. Now the universe can be called a movement of love and a movement of perfection. It is a great chorus of sound, of light, of love and deep meaning expressed and expressing, unfolding ever anew. The world you are in, plays its part in this mighty symphony and it is as the ones there awaken to the awareness of the love that they are, that the great symphony is heard and expressed. And so it is in listening to the tones of the vibratory wavelengths, which are expressed most perfectly as each one is the love that they are, expressed and expressing, that your part can be played.

It is in the harmony and the peaceful living of life in the way the Creator would have you live, that the music is best expressed. It is the divine will of the Source. It is the nature of existence. Like it or not, it is the way it is. All are created this way, and all are included in this. It is truly as each one opens up, that the Wholeness is expressed most perfectly. And so the importance of John's writing was without question.

Each day, John would begin his session with a time of quiet, and he would invite in those of us working with him. He and I would express again our love and devotion, and we would together, begin the work for the day. Often the call to heed was to take care of business, or to attend to a family matter or to just relax. For the writing, although important, did not supercede the other elements in John's life, for the happiness of each one is what we here are interested in. And so it is the fulfillment on all levels, that we are interested in having each one experience. Fulfillment is the nature of Source, and it is an ongoing experience. The fulfillment that we are speaking of here is the true fulfillment, that which provides peace, joy, contentment, and the bringing into the world the unique gifts of that one.

The unique way that each one has of giving his/her gift, is what the guides are involved in, and is what the will of the Source is. Not a thing out of place here, for each one has a special, a unique and purposeful way, of giving his/her gift. Now the gifts are only able to be given in that way, by that one, and so there is an importance to the giving and the gift. Without that one, that gift could not be given. And so it is imperative that each one realize that his/her importance to the Whole is real. Each one gives the gift and each one is the gift, for each one is a part of the Wholeness, without which there is no completeness. It is in recognizing the Wholeness, and in the awareness that the joy is felt by the others, for if deaf ears and limited awareness are there, the joy of that one is not experienced. We long for each one to feel his/her Completeness, his/her Wholeness, as we then can rejoice fully in the connection. We are One and this Oneness cannot leave out anyone. All are inextricably involved.

Chapter 14

There came into the lives of this dear family, a new phenomenon, which the family felt as truly something new. They were at a point where they were ready to embrace the fullness of their existence and were open daily to this. We here, now decided that the couple should have the experience of their multidimensionality to an even greater degree, and so we allowed the direct experience of our involvement to be felt. It happened in this way. We would begin each day with an idea of what would happen that day. We would begin by informing John or Kara that this day there would transpire something of import, such as an important phone call, a special visit, or an event that would surprise them. As the day unfolded, the event, the person, or the phone call would occur. It was called precognition by some and now was incorporated into their lives.

Kara was the one who had the gift most fully and she was the one who would have the knowing most frequently. John also felt this and together they often talked about what they were sensing/feeling in the early morning hours of the day.

One day as they were having their morning together time, Kara said that she had a feeling, a knowing, that a special visitor would be coming to the farm that day. She said she felt it strongly and so the couple left with curiosity as they began their daily work. Kara noted that she was mildly uneasy that day and felt some hesitation to what the day might bring. John turned to me as he did regularly and asked for my arms of safety and security to be held over him and his family. He too, felt some mild trepidation about the day.

We here, also knew of what was to come, for we were in view of the whole panorama of what the family was involved in. We knew of the turn of events that was about to happen and of the sudden and violent experience that now was coming into view. For it so happened that in the city, unbeknownst to John and Kara, was a group who had as their mission, their purpose, to destroy those involved with the movement of love and connection that was the truth of life there. There were those who were intent on destroying this peaceful family, for it represented to them, the destroying of a power base that had been served by causing unrest in the people and by driving dissention and disharmony into the minds of people there. The group was part of a national movement of small but intense proportions, working underground to disrupt the culture and especially those who advocated harmony and love. For it was as the harmony and peace of a people were felt, that the messages of foreboding, which opened up the people to being manipulated and managed and controlled, were unable to be propagated there.

Here was a group who had so isolated themselves from the truth of who they were, that they had closed off the very life enhancing and life fulfilling purpose inherent in each one. Now they had sold out to the power and to the profit of greed and the subjugation to the mind set of corporate culture.

Kara heard a car drive up in the front of the house and called to John who was busy working in the attic study. Mark was at school and Mary was down for her nap. John came down just as the doorbell rang. A man in a dark suit said he wanted to talk with John, and that he had some business of importance there. John invited him to sit down in the living room and Kara went into the kitchen to make some tea.

The man who introduced himself as Mr. Brown, said he was there for a specific purpose, to inform John that he was under investigation for false and misleading writings; that his writings were breaking the law in that they were creating a form of anti- patriotism by encouraging people to be dissenters, to follow a belief system which advocated ignoring the basic understandings of the laws of the land. He pointed to a paragraph were the transmitted text encouraged everyone to turn inward for their truth and to find the measure of the movement, the next steps within, as guidance was attended to.

Now I spoke quietly to John and let him know that I was with him, that I would direct him here and to listen carefully. I told him to tell the man that in no way were the writings written to encourage people to break the law but that the truth of it was certainly the availability of inner guidance from the transcendent and that this was the ultimate truth people should follow. The man then said that if the writings didn't stop, there would be consequences to John and his family. The man pointed to pictures of Mark and Mary and stated he had the law on his side. As the man left, I told John that we were in this together, and that this man was indeed, out to cause him problems.

It was as the days unfolded that the problems became apparent and that the family would feel the brutality of the dark stranger. In earnest now, John turned to me and to the others working with him on the transcendent plane. Would this blow over, was this just a hate monger out to throw fear into their lives, or would he back up his words with actions? Should he do something to protect his family, was protection called for here? I instructed John to call the police and tell them of the situation. John did, but got little reassurance, as no crime had been committed which the police could deal with. The threats to John and his family were listened to, but the police said they were helpless at this point, to do anything other than to file a report.

A new book was about to be published and John was ready to embark on a tour of seven cities, speaking and signing books. He was going to be away for a period of two weeks. Kara, who encouraged his travels as a part of his mission, assured him that they would be all right and that she had a cadre of neighbor friends to help her. Also, her parents would come for a while during that time to help out. But even given these assurances, John felt uneasy about the trip. We now instructed John to plan on a return visit between the two weeks to check on things and to reassure Kara and himself that all was okay. John's itinerary was posted on his web site and people knew what cities he would be in and when. His schedule was known far and wide.

We were aware that the man and his hate group were actively looking for a way to harm the family and they were preparing for the time when John would be gone. It was now that Kara felt the precognition strongly. John had left. She became aware that the phones were being tapped and that anything she would tell John would be overheard. What should she do? Her sense of impending disaster was strong, and as she listened to us guide her she so followed. She told the children that they were going on a little trip to grandma's house. She took the children to a neighbors house and there she called John and informed him of her choice to go to grandma's until he would return in two weeks. She called her mother and made the arrangements as we so directed her to do. As she drove away she sensed relief as she felt her safety and peace return.

Now those who had vowed to harm John and his family knew not of this plan and so the house that burned to the ground that night held not John, nor Kara, nor Mary, nor Mark. The fire bomb with its explosives hurt no one. As Kara's neighbor called her at grandma's and as the news was shared, a prayer of gratitude and tears was whispered and our arms of love went around Kara and the children. John came to his mother-in-law's quickly and now the two were faced with what to do. For the question of their future was to be looked at seriously and now we guided the family with the love and concern which we felt for them.

Chapter 15

As John and Kara surveyed the devastation that lay before them, they could not but wonder with gratitude, about the safety and the guidance given to Kara to leave that night. For although their lovely home was gone, they were complete, and they were together. Nothing much remained to be salvaged. The barn stood without any damage, but the house was completely gone. John wondered about now-gone records and writings, the notes and the business items that he had as so essential to his work. Kara cried as she saw the remains of the children's bedrooms and the kitchen with its charred and disfigured appliances and furniture.

It was a heartache for the couple and as they hugged each other, I told John clearly that they needn't be dismayed. That all that was gone was truly not that which was indispensable to him or to the work. For we were with them here on the spiritual side of things. We were here, and we would not leave them ever. We were intrinsically involved with them. Kara asked John if they would have the incident again, if they should choose to rebuild? Was it worth it to stay there or should they seek a different home, a different location? John, too, wondered about that. We were quick to assure him that the rebuilding of the house was in order and that the insurance money and the funds they had would cover the costs.

Also, that the call was to now add to their prayers, the name of Mr. Brown. For it was in remembering, that in spite of the evidence of hate, who Mr. Brown really was underneath his ignorance and his disillusion, his miasma, was a child of the Source, just as they were. That to run from fear was, and to generate hate toward him was, not a way to heal the hate in the world. Rather, to look at these ones with an awareness of their birth-right and to carry on was the way. Right there Kara and John, each in their own way, asked for a clearing of the mind set of illusion on the hearts and minds of those who had perpetrated this and asked for the holy spirit to be made known to them.

As the healing and the letting go of the impact of devastation was felt, John and Kara moved forward in their life. They purchased a trailer to live in while their home was being built and the children were able to resume their routines as best they could. As the summer came, much of the time was spent outside watching the progress on the house. The couple had decided on a traditional two-story farm house, much like the other one, but with more room and with a greater sense of space. This was good, for it was not long until the birth of their third child. This would be a Christmas baby and Mark and Mary now would be joined by another brother or sister to enjoy. John and Kara were also looking forward to this baby, for their children had brought such joy into their lives and such a wonderful sense of family.

Kara now was able to clean the trailer quickly and then outside she and the children would go, hanging out the clothes on the line, or tending the garden. The children loved to be outside and the warm sun brought a radiance and glow to them all. This summer would go down in the memories of the family as one of the most peaceful ones they had ever spent. The long summer days were filled with the sound of nature, the smells of flowers, and the lilting gentle breezes so often felt there. The pregnancy was going smoothly and the pain of the loss they had suffered was dissipating.

John had now begun to be reinvigorated as he had too, rested and been able to let the disaster be felt as in the past. His routine was one of writing early in the morning and responding to business matters until early afternoon. Then, after a brief lunch, he would play with the children, then inspect the work on the builders and make decisions about the house. No word was heard again of Mr. Brown and he continued to be in the prayers of this couple.

We here, who were working with this couple, now also felt that the movement of love that was being sent out had brought about a change in the lives of the hate group, for they had turned their efforts to destruct John and Kara, elsewhere. At the deeper levels, more was going on with that group, but that is another story. We saw that the spirit of love was bringing forth order out of chaos and harmony out of hate. The power of love was mighty in its ability to transform and heal.

Chapter 16

As the summer days wore on, the family now could see their house taking shape. They were delighted in the large windows opening out to the fields and the spaciousness which would provide them much needed room for their growing family. John had designed an office that was a separate unit from the house, but connected by an enclosed walkway, and his interests were accommodated beautifully by this new design. Neighbors stopped by often to see the progress and to support the family there. The couple decided that they would have a large open house to celebrate the completion of the home early in November.

Now the friends and relatives that came were equally delighted in the lovely new home and the robust health and joy of the family. The new baby was due soon and Kara was experiencing an easy pregnancy and had felt delight all along the way. John was busy with a new book which was bringing into the world, wonderful news of connection, and shedding light on the world scene as now was being experienced there.

This book was truly one that would herald in much that had been forgotten and ignored and much that would shed light on a troubled world which found itself in the throws of chaos and confusion. For the dominant forces of the financial institutions were pushing people to the limits of their ability to live. The greed and self-serving corporations that were now joining each other in strong conglomerates, wielded a mighty hand of power and influence, even to the minutiae of daily life. People were struggling there and there was unrest in the land. John knew of this and knew of the desperate plight of people who were caught in the web of financial debt and short supply of income.

Many knew of the tribulation felt throughout the world and many felt helpless to do anything, and so this book which was now underway, had the answers for people. For in many ways and through many pages of teaching, the book told the people of their direct connection to the transcendent there, that they were not alone there and that they had mighty support and encouragement and a way out there. As the pages unfolded, the words of hope and possibility came forth within the teaching again and again, of direct guidance available to everyone. No one was left out. No one was felt as separate, for the transcendent was there for all, was all, expressed. John felt a surge of overwhelming importance in this as he wrote it, for he knew that what he was bringing forth was invaluable to people. And so it was a loving and willing time he spent at his computer on a daily basis, bringing to the people the delightful good news of the friendship of the spiritual dimension.

John and I were working mightily here and I told him that not only through him, but through many others, was the work being done. Not only through him, but through others throughout the world, was this good news of connection being brought forth. And that his works, his books, would encourage many more to turn inward and to connect directly with me. Many more would begin the teaching and soon there would be a transition point, a point where the understanding of our direct connection, would be felt throughout the world. Soon the awakening would be felt in a way unknown before, and the transformation of a people into their natural inheritance would be felt. Lovingly, we worked on the issues, and the joy John felt was significant.

Now the time of the birth was near and the cold days of winter were coming. But the house was warm and withstood the wind blowing up from the East. The snow formed a frosty blanket over the country side and the baby was soon ready to come into the world. As the Christmas lights shone on the tree and as the advent calendar pages were turned by the children every day, the arrangements were made for the children to stay with Grandma for a few days around the time of the birth. This gave Kara and John a little time to be together and to rest before the arrival of the new baby. Preparations for Christmas involved the numerous traditional things, but more importantly it was a time for the couple to turn lovingly to me, for we had come so far together, and we were so inextricably interwoven in daily life, and in the many decisions that were made. We all relished in the joy of the upcoming event and in the delight of the children as they lived and in the wonderful book that was also about to be published. For the fullness of life, the embracing of life in all its many dimensions was what we, here, wanted for all those we were involved in, for everyone.

It was Christmas Eve that Kara felt the birth pangs. And it was Christmas Day that Julian was born to the couple. A healthy baby, she was a girl of delicate and even features. It was a Christmas of much gifting, and as John told the Christmas story this year, it was in the maternity ward of their small town hospital. Each child gently held the baby as they sang songs about the birth of baby Jesus, who was born so long ago. The children delighted in their new sister and Julian proved to be a baby with a happy disposition. Mark felt particularly protective of his sisters, making sure of their well-being as best a little boy could. He took his responsibilities seriously and the parents were careful not to burden him with too much, as his sensitivity to things was obvious. He showed a robust nature though and seemed to bounce back from minor setbacks or disappointments with ease.

The focus of school projects and learning was important to Mark and he put his efforts into all that he undertook with the intensity of a much older child. And so science projects turned out to be huge learning experiences as was writing a report or reading a book. He was fascinated with all aspects of nature and was continually telling his parents about the rotation of the planets, or the unfolding of a cocoon into a butterfly or the sequential steps in a snake losing its skin. Mary was the artistic one and loved to draw and paint. She would gaze at the sky as the sun set, describing and exclaiming over the vivid red hues she saw. Now the farm was a wonderful place for these children and they basked in the joy of nature in all its wonders. We rejoiced in their joy and felt our own happiness each day.

Chapter 17

Now there came into the life of this family an opportunity to live in New York City for a summer. John had received an invitation to teach a course on spiritual involvement in modern times at a new center that had recently been developed to explore the burgeoning interest in the spiritual dimension. The center would provide an apartment for John which was big enough for his family also. The couple welcomed this opportunity for the children, and especially Mark who was so eager to learn more. I encouraged this as it seemed to be a step which would allow for John to share the good news of connection directly with many more on a basis of personal sharing and involvement.

The director of the center was a woman who had been impressed with John's writings and with his apparent connection to me. Her name was Margaret and she was a biblical scholar, who, herself, had written several books on the historical Jesus. We had been working with her, and we had encouraged her to ask John, for although he was still controversial in many religious circles, he offered a fresh and radical approach to spirituality, and he was a daring interpreter of modern times and of the difficulty of a highly manipulated culture that mankind was in.

Margaret saw in him a fresh perspective, for she saw a man who had withstood the criticism and the disparaging remarks with courage and fearlessness. She saw that John was one who had been willing to forgo the accolades of the establishment, and live with the uncertainty that the winds of time, the tides of change, might at any moment cause him trouble.

Margaret, herself, had been one who had stuck her neck out, but her involvement with me, was not to her knowledge, as direct as John's was. However, Margaret's mind set would change as she began understanding and hearing of the directness possible, to live with me and with her spiritual guidance there. She was at the point in her journey, in her unfolding, to open up to more, and so it was in this context that she invited him to come.

The two would teach courses throughout the summer; Margaret, on the historical Jesus, and John, on the current involvement with the spiritual, with me. Now many people had signed up to take these classes as the publicity had reached throughout the country, through those in churches who were more liberal and open to the new. They were expecting several hundred people to attend the classes and of those there were many who were well known in the spiritual circles, the pastors and the teachers of divinity throughout the seminaries of the land. And so it was a group that was made up of those who were somewhat open to that which was outside the doctrine that had been taught them, but who had opened to the point where their curiosity had proved beneficial.

John felt that this would give him an opportunity to speak directly from me and to give the teachings from the point of originality. And so his fear, his anxiety, was minor as he met with Margaret and found her to be an intelligent and sincere woman. Although John had worked with others, he had never worked in a way that involved such a committed outlook to bring change to the people, for Margaret had brought the center into being through her conviction that the spiritual dimension in people was now ready to move ahead, that the knowing, the directness of experience was being felt by thousands in the country. And so the money she had inherited from her father who had been wealthy, was now being used to provide the purchase of the building, the hiring of staff, and the publicity necessary to bring people there. The interest and involvement had been tremendous and the center had grown over the few short years it had existed.

The summer sessions had particularly been popular, for they allowed many who were busy during the school year to come and partake. John wondered about a format for his class and turned to me to ask what I thought about that. Now we worked together to develop a series of topics that addressed the specific topic of modern spirituality. Together, we laughed, as the topic of modern spirituality was a misnomer as spirituality was timeless. But we could address spirituality as it pertained to modern times. I told him that the call was to not only inform the group that I was directly available to them, but that John was now speaking through, from me.

This would be embraced by some, but many would come with skepticism until they had become convinced. I encouraged John to not worry about this, for it was radical to expect those who equated speaking through with charlatans and quacks to believe otherwise. But the ongoing experience of hearing the words and then finding that each one has guidance available would be the ultimate measure for each one.

The small apartment was close to parks and the zoo and there were weekends when Kara and John would investigate the city. Mark loved the hustle and bustle of the people and found much to be interested in. Mary also enjoyed the new experiences and welcomed the outings each weekend. Julian was content to be by her mother's side and close to her brother and sister. Margaret introduced them to some college students who were more than willing to watch the children on the few occasions that Kara and John needed to attend some events, and so the summer was passing quickly.

Now John was involved in a significant mission there and the words that came forth were important beyond the immediate. For John was bringing change on a scale of significance. Many who heard him speak through and heard the words of love and relationship come forth, were convinced that indeed, the culture had been misled. That the reality that had been promulgated into the minds of mankind was faulty. For the truth of life, the direct connection to the transcendent and the relationship therein, had been discarded as wishful thinking. Now more and more experienced this, and more and more realized that this was not an insane and cruel hoax, but rather it was the very fundamental truth of the way things worked. I assured John that the gift he was giving would spread far and wide and that the transformation of a people was at hand.

Now the relationship between Margaret and John deepened and as she herself realized the truth of the direct and immediate relationship with me she felt a love for John and for the wonderful changes he was bringing to her and to the world. I spoke with Margaret now and assured her that all was well and that she, too, was providing a way for many more to come to know the truth.

But Margaret mistook her love for John for love that was physical in nature and began efforts to woo him. Unconsciously at first, she found herself drawn to him, knowing full well that he was a happily married family man and devoted to his wife and family. Now she found herself engaging in fantasies about him. Because Margaret had never found love from a man that was lasting for her, she had sensed an incompleteness. She had longed for someone like John and when she found him, she allowed her mind to engage in scenarios in which they were alone together. She imagined that he too, felt this for her and misread his enthusiasm and his energy about the sessions, to be signs that he felt love for her.

The two were now requested to go on a newscast together and the trip to the studio was a few hours away. Margaret suggested that she drive and that they would be back by early evening, as the live broadcast was to be over by early afternoon. John agreed and felt that here was another opportunity to tell more about the good news of direct connection. The broadcast went well, although many pointed questions were asked of John from a wary media. After the broadcast, Margaret suggested they go to a small restaurant on the waterfront a few miles away. John was eager to get home to Kara and the children, but he was hungry too, and happy that the newscast had gone well. While they were finishing their meal, Margaret said she needed to talk to John about something that was on her mind. Could they walk out onto the beach a moment?

Now as the waves washed ashore, Margaret began crying. She was unhappy in her personal life, she told him. Things seemed okay on the surface but underneath she was lonely. She drew herself to John and he held her hand to comfort her. But here I stepped in and told John that the call was to be firm with her, and tell her in no uncertain terms that you were devoted to Kara and that even though you admired her for the wonderful work she was doing, you were not attracted to her on the physical level, and that she needed to turn to guidance to find the answer to her loneliness.

With calm assurance, John walked to the car and said he would be glad to drive home as she calmed herself. Margaret regained her composure and though somewhat embarrassed, she knew that John was right. The incident was forgotten after that, and the two were able to relate without the tension felt. As the summer ended, the family said good-bye to Margaret and the others they had met, and to the city and the fun and to the adventure they had shared.

Chapter 18

Now the summer was over and school was to begin for the two older children. The fall activities had started, which included increased travel for John, and more involvement with the work of publishing the books. John had now completed seven books, and had felt that the awareness of the message of inner guidance was being heard there. This brought great happiness to him, for as each book was written and published, the information that would bring radical change to people had been heard. The information that had been so long forgotten and had been dismissed as irrelevant had now penetrated larger and larger numbers there.

John knew that his life had meaning and he knew that the ongoing involvement with spirit was indeed, the relationship of transformation for him. We were working with him there and we now let him know that his life would be one of increased involvement with his multidimensional nature. We had much to bring forth and it was as John experienced this that he could most readily write and talk about the truth of it.

Now he opened up to receive and he trusted into the ongoing involvement there. He relished in the joy of our companionship and each day we walked together and talked together and planned and worked on the writings and the teachings. John felt the daily renewal of hope and joy. He now was given moments of what could be called Completeness, Wholeness, when he knew that nothing was lacking and that life was meaningful and full, refreshing and filled with the deepest love imaginable. His life took on a simplicity, for he no longer felt the need to strategize or plan events, but rather as he turned inward with intention he would have the knowing and the knowhow to move forward.

Now this was not something that involved thinking. And this was not something that involved drivenness, nor an act of great willfulness. It was truly only a choice to live from the alignment, with the transcendent there. It was a choice to see things from the mind of the Source or from the viewpoint of the unity of all, the Allness. Now the unity of the Allness, the Oneness of life, was what was so evident to him as he continued his work. For he saw the same love, the same light, in everything he saw. Underneath the sometimes discordant behaviors of others, was the truth of them, the Allness of them, and he saw the equality of them with him and with all.

This awareness gave John a perspective on life that moved him away from his separate thinking, his ego, and moved him into the flow of life, moving into the Wholeness of life, that forward and loving flow of the Source. How wonderful this was, for it now was so easy to bring to the work the forward momentum and the right knowing that held such perfection in it. We here, on the spiritual side, were delighted that John had moved so lovingly into the free flowing flow of life given from the abundance of the Source. We here, were so delighted and we were so moved in the joy of connection, that we felt most strongly, the love from John. He reflected back to us what we felt for him. And the dynamic was embraced there. What could he now bring forth that would help gift the world?

It was now that we began a writing of true help for mankind, for this writing was about the necessary and honest way one has available to bring about all that is needed to transform that one. Now the words were again words of coming into direct connection with inner guidance. But in this work we gave the necessary mind set to have to bring about this. For it was truly important that people understand that they would be called upon to give up the mind set of ego involvement with its concomitant falseness of what is truly important, and let go of the striving which has been so forcibly imbedded into the notion of success there. For the ego is intent on one-up-man-ship, and it accomplishes this by comparing and by judging itself in relationship to others. Now this is always a setup for dissatisfaction and it is always a setup for hatred. For the ego is intent on maintaining itself.

Now the understanding of the workings of ego is important because it will help to understand its potential for undermining one's peace. As the understanding of the ego is known, people will be able to detect it as it rears its ugly head and dismiss it as the insane strategies it uses to maintain itself are felt. Now the ego is truly a fabrication of defenses, and not an entity, but it is a system of defenses maintained by feeding itself and disregarding any notion of peace and fulfillment. For peace and fulfillment are what will annihilate the set of defenses. And it is intent on not having this happen. And so the fabricated world that man/woman kind exist in, is truly the perception which egos have projected onto the world, which is in truth, a home of heavenly origination. And so it is the ego which is the ultimate threat to each one.

But joyfully, there is a way to extinguish this mind set and that is by claiming no mind but the mind of the Originator, no mind but the mind of the Source, and no mind but the right mind of the joined perspective. Now this is the most far-reaching and life-changing news for each one, for it will free each one from the tyranny of the ego as it pummels and conives into each one, false and misleading goals which promise happiness but never will deliver.

Not through the accumulations of goods nor the amassing of wealth, nor the focus on physical body development nor on perfect health through the control of the ego, is happiness gained. For the happiness of the Source which is available to each one, is the happiness, the Completeness of connection to the Whole, the transcendent, there. Here lies the forward movement of each one as the Source would have you move, and here lies the perfection which is the perfection of one joined.

We here, love you and we want you to experience your Wholeness, your Completeness, and so it is in the joining that the way is made plain and the true peace is felt. We are One there, and we are intent on each one feeling into his/her Oneness. Now is the time to bring about this change and to begin the journey inward. Now is the time. And so John delighted in bringing in this book which was entitled, Forever Joined, Forever Joy.

Chapter 19

The cold days of winter were soon to be felt and the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons were approaching. Kara looked out at the leaves falling from the large maple trees and felt at peace in the world. Julian was walking now and was at the delightful age of discovery of the world as a toddler. She was observant and learned quickly, eager to please her parents and to emulate her older brother and sister. She liked the running games and the hiding games and was delightfully surprised when Mark would pop out from behind a sofa and surprise her. She relished in the story time that still continued with Mary and Mark, and would sit in the middle of the two older children, quietly taking everything in. Julian had been a healthy baby and now enjoyed each day, eager to embrace the world she was in.

Kara was extremely busy feeding and clothing her family and keeping things in order. She loved the moments after the kids were in bed and the dishes were done and the house was quiet. These moments she shared with John and the two of them would talk about how blessed they were and how happy they were. Their relationship had been one of deep friendship, for they delighted in many of the same interests. They would often think back to the early years when they were in college, and of their dear friend Ellen, who had been so good to them.

Now they planned on having a family reunion at Christmas, for many of the relatives from both sides of the family would be in town and not too far from them to drive the distance. John had wanted to also invite his four high school friends, the friends who had explored and found the true meaning of religion, the Voice for Truth within. And so the events were planned and looked forward to.

John's mother and Sarah would be coming first, and then, shortly after they left, John's dad, who had since remarried, would arrive. John had met his father's new wife only once, but felt she was someone who seemed to make his father happy, and in this he rejoiced. Kara's parents and relatives would come shortly after John's father and wife left and then during the days between Christmas and New Year's they would have a neighborhood open house for the many neighbors and friends they had come to know. Shortly after that, John invited Steven, Thomas, Mark and Paul whom he had kept in touch with individually, but who had not been together as a group since the college days. All the events of that happy holiday season went well, and many relationships were renewed and refreshed.

The family now had come into the time when the long dark days of winter were felt. Too cold to play outside for long, the children were indoors and seemed to need a lot of attention from the parents. School provided some interests, but the long hours after school needed to be filled. Kara had thought that she was feeling a little run down from the busy holiday season and from the demands of the children as they were inside so much. Her energy level had lagged and she had told John she was in need of more rest. But the chores continued to mount and the needs of a growing family continued. John looked at her with compassion, pitching in with help whenever possible, but Kara continued to feel rundown. Now Kara turned to me in earnest and asked for what she should do? How should she cope here and should she get help, take medication? What should she do?

We now brought to her a way to regain her strength and her renewed vitality. We began by telling her that it was fine for her to take naps during the day time when Julian was sleeping. That she should embrace this and not feel that she needed to do things during this time. We also told her to allow for help to be hired, her neighbor's teenage daughter, to watch the children for a few hours when they got home from school. We then told her to take some vitamin supplements and to drive into their little town, a few times a week and enjoy a Yoga class. This would bring about an increase in her energy level and would bring about some time for her to focus on her own needs. Her energy would return in a few short months as spring and summer approached.

These things she did and she began to feel renewed vigor within a short period of time. John delighted in Kara's renewed health and together they thanked the Father for his continued abiding with and his continued guidance.

John embraced the health regimen and he too, soon took the supplements and began exercising on a regular basis, as he was so guided. The need to take care of the body was not something that was to be ignored and the turning inward to find the perfect steps to take were what was called for.

Now the body was a topic to come up in writing as John so focused on it.

For the body is truly different than what he'd been told there. The body is a place where the will of the Source is manifest and is a place of communication, a communication device there. The body is, in all ways, meant to bring to the world the meaning that the Source has for that one. Now the body is truly captive to the mind, and the body is truly that which is intent on bringing forth into conscious awareness what the mind wills for it. And so the intention we bring to the body and the spirit of care and nurturing of the body is of great importance.

But the problem is that frequently the body is used to bring to that one, ego gratifications and one-up-man-ship. Now this is a misuse of the body and will ultimately not be fulfilling. For the body, in its design, is meant to be the place of communication of the will of the Source, which is to be the giver of love, to be the place where love is transmitted outwardly to others there.

And so it is as one understands that the body is not that which is adrift on its own without a captain, a commander, a leader, but rather it is that which is under the subjugation of the mind and the consciousness of its spiritual inhabitant. You are the body in which is the living spiritual entity of you. You are the mind, the consciousness, in which body experiences itself. This is the truth there, and it is freeing as you understand the immensity of this statement.

Now as you experience sickness and as you feel the ebb and tide of your health, let it be remembered that as you tell your body that you desire perfect order to be experienced, and that you desire the will of the Source to be felt in your body, that you can understand the relationship that you have with your body.

Now these things John wrote about in the book and these writings he and Kara practiced in their lives. And they were healthy and felt the youthful glow as they did so commit to living out from their Source, their inner guidance, from the relationship with the transcendent there.

Chapter 20

John knew that the works that he was bringing into the world from me, from his guidance, were significant and he knew that the meaning of the time that he was living in was truly like no other. And so the books and the teachings were uppermost in his mind. He felt that the works were important for people, for now people were learning that they were ready to embrace something new. They were ready to find again what had been lost and what had been forgotten there. And so, John knew that his mission was indeed, that which carried with it, importance beyond what he could even know. Now his commitment to write was important for us on the spiritual plane, for it was necessary for him to have the commitment in order for the flow of the works to come forth.

You see, commitment and intention are necessary ingredients in the movement of each one. It is in the commitment and in the intention that the flow of the movement will come forth. As each one becomes aware of the guidance within, and as each one discovers his/her mission there and seeks with intention to find the way, the movement will occur. It is a necessary precursor to the unfolding there. Now these things we taught John, and these things John did so write in his books. He was at the point of giving to the world, news of the utmost importance again and now he felt that the movement was occurring at a rapid rate. A rate that was far greater than what he had originally thought. For there was an undercurrent of change in the air. There was an awakening to the greater Wholeness of whom and what mankind/womankind truly was.

The awareness of the reality of who we are is now coming forth at a pace that far surpasses what we thought it would, and the tides of time are turning. This is wonderful and this is truly the most helpful thing that could happen to mankind. It is the natural thing to come forth, for it is the truth of existence. The truth of things will have its way. Then the truth of the created Universe will come forth for what it is.

John felt the joy of this each day and he felt the forward movement within his own life. As the cares and worries of the days were turned over to guidance, the peace that comes from releasing and letting go was felt. The burdens of the day were released and allowed to be shared, to be turned over to the true help mate there. What peace this gave to John and to Kara and how happy they were. Each day was felt as truly happy for them and they delighted in the joy of their family and of each other. We also rejoiced there and we were elated at the wonderful connection so easily felt with this happy family. We were working with John there, and we were able to share with him much that would help mankind. The doorway to the transcendent was open and the love and the guidance poured forth. All was well there, and all was felt as blissful. We were delighted to bring to the family all that was necessary for them to lead a happy life and to feel fulfilled.

Now the days passed quickly and the work progressed. The children were growing and the early years passed into the high school years for the children. Mary had continued her love of art and had now chosen to be a designer, a professional artist, as she departed from high school. She had entered an art school and was finding the joy of the creative life. Julian had found the joy of music and was an eager musician, concentrating on the piano and the violin, two instruments she took to easily and loved. Mark had continued his love of nature and science and had decided to study physics. His grandfather, who also was a physicist, had encouraged Mark, and now the affinity for it proved truly there. John wondered about the children as they would be faced with living in a culture that was not always open to the way of spirit, and yet John knew that his children were in touch with inner guidance and that they too, had a best friend to turn to.

Kara now felt some relief from the pressures of the early childhood years. As the children were involved in their activities she wondered about her life, for it seemed her life was ready to open up to a greater experience of involvement with something of her own. She was ready to embark on her own studies and to rekindle her love of teaching there. I encouraged this as she was one who had so much to give. Now there came into the family an opportunity for Kara to take a part time job at the high school, teaching English, her favorite subject. We together, worked on her lesson plans and she delighted in the opportunity for the semester of teaching this class. The children were proud of their mother and it was fun to see her in the classroom. But the teaching position was soon over, as the one who had taken leave, returned.

Kara and John now had to decide what they would do as the nest emptied and the children all were in college. They felt the loss of the busy household and wondered if they would ever adjust to the empty house, for they knew that it would not be long before the children would be off on their own and starting families of their own. This period of time was met with inner guidance, for I assured the couple that their lives held meaning beyond the family, and that the changes were natural and didn't mean that their family times were over, just that they were less frequent and that they would play a different role. The parents looked forward to the return of their children at school break times and the graduations that followed filled the couple with pride in the work of their children. They were happy and they were contented and they were abided with by me.

Now as this wonderful story has come to a point where John and Kara have moved into their middle years and as the family is now grown, let us find the life events that charted the course for this couple. Let us review what had happened along the way. For the events that were of the greatest significance were those that began long ago before the couple was even born. For long before baby Kara came into the world, she had taken her desire to come again, to those in counsel with her. She had told them of her desire to give the gift of inner guidance to the world and to bring joy to a partner there and to give birth to children. These things she had desired and as she had met with counselors on the spiritual plane, she was brought to the earth plane to live again here in the third dimension.

And so John, who also had desired to return to Earth, had dedicated himself to bringing to the world news of direct connection to the Father, the Source, there. I had known these two and I had told them that they would be met there with the love which I had for them, and that as they opened up to received, I would join them on their journey. John and Kara's life on the earth plane is truly a life that was decided by them long before they incarnated. And the mission they had decided on had been known to them long before the events happened. For they were fulfilling a potential and giving a gift to the world.

All have this potential. All have agreed to a mission, a gifting, to the Earth as they have chosen to reincarnate. Many have gifts to bring that will open up to the world, the good news of connection and many have gifts of loving involvement with others to share here. Now the days of opening up to your mission are here. The days of finding your life plan is here, and the way to do this is to turn lovingly inward, and ask that you be given the knowing, the knowhow and the mind set to proceed. For as you do so open up to hear, you will be given what you need to proceed here. This is the truth of things dear one, this is the truth, and so let me encourage you to not dismiss this as idle words, nor as something to disregard. For it is of the utmost importance that you heed your inner calling. It is of the utmost importance that you not dismiss or ignore the movement you are feeling in your life. We here, encourage you to listen and turn over to inner guidance, your desire to give your gift and in this will be found the joy and the happiness that so filled John and Kara. You will find the peace of your being there and you will delight in what comes forth. We love you and we want you for our own, to know you there. Let in and allow dear one, truly, let in and allow.

Chapter 21

There is much that I could tell you about what you must do to open up to your inner guidance. There is much that I will share with you, for there is now an opportunity to give to you that which will move you forward there. As you have heard of the life of John and Kara, you have learned of the joy of living in relationship. As you have heard their story, I have shared with you how they have moved through their life into a place of confidence there. For as they have so turned inward, they have found the way.

The movement of your Source, which is you identified, will come forth as you do so let in and allow. The time is now, dear one, the time is now. Do not postpone this as an eventuality, for the need is now. As you have faced much in your life that is perplexing to you, and as you have felt in a quagmire there, you have allowed the limited mind set to continue on.

Soon this will change, for the mind set of millions is being allowed to dissipate. The mind set of millions is being allowed to be released from the limitation of the enculturated way, the way of the ego. Now do not fear. Do not think that you are in any way being led down a path of delusion, for indeed, what you have heard is the truth there.

Now the time to open up is at hand. I am with you and I do have for you a relationship of nonsolubility. It is permanent and it is there to bring you always, the correct, the perfect forward movement there. You are not alone as you live. It is in the spirit of love that I tell you these things. It is in the spirit of true brotherhood that I share with you this story of John and Kara. For as you see in them, a reflection of some of the challenges you are facing, you will know that there is a way through the problem, the dilemma, the situation, you find yourself in. Now you can rest assured that I am with you there. As you turn to your counsel and as you listen with intention, you will come into the knowing, the forward movement there.

Let us resume the story for there is still much to tell and there is still an unfolding in this family's life. Now the couple is faced with the empty nest and they are in some ways liberated. They have experienced the joy of their children and now have felt some satisfaction that they are raised and that they are out in the world and making it on their own. But the situation has caused some mild anxiety, for they are still quit young, and the couple is still full of energy to give and to live. What should they do? John, who still is writing on the books, feels as if it is time for him to undertake something new, as he has been working on this for years now, and so the couple turns to me and asks what should they do? What is the way for them to spend the years ahead in a way that will feel productive and meaningful? Should they continue on with the teaching and writing or should they venture out into something new?

Together, we pondered this, and together, we brought into the situation, divine guidance. Many who were working with them were brought into this and as love is shared, the answers were brought forth. For we saw that the couple needed to experience some variation in their lives and some form of experience that would refresh and renew them. And so we explored the idea of building a retreat place, a home that would be for them, a place of relaxation away from the usual pace of life. They decided to go on a series of trips to determine where this quiet place should be. As they were not at this time worried about income and as the farm was paid off, they had the finances to do this and so they were eager to spend the next year or two finding their place of peace, their retreat, and their place of renewal.

We here, encouraged this, for it was certainly in our interest to have the couple feel happy and fulfilled. It was with guidance that the couple made their decision and they felt the rightness of this as they had so turned inward and listened. What fun it was for them to plan and to explore different ideas of possibilities for what they might want. Should it be a Hawaiian home with island breezes wafting their gentle touch or should they head to Mexico and the balmy and sun-filled change of culture that Mexico represents. These things the couple explored and others to. Now the trip to Hawaii was planned and the couple delighted in this. As they departed, they felt the surge of new possibility and the joy of our companionship there.

Many who felt the joy of this couple, who were working with them on the invisible plane, were delighted in the adventure the couple was on and felt a gladness that now the couple could relax and enjoy the years ahead.

What fun the couple had as they searched the island for the perfect place there. They enjoyed the tropical breezes and they delighted in the new-found freedom to explore and investigate their surroundings. They delighted in this and at night in their motel they thanked me and they asked for continued guidance in their adventure to find the spot that would be that which would bring the needed respite and also the spot that would prove most beneficial for all involved.

For the movement of the Source always takes into account all those involved. And so those who would sell the home and those who would provide the other services to the family and all the numerous ones involved in the transaction, from buying the furniture to bringing the mail, would be involved in the knowing of the Source. All those would benefit from this as this is the way of the Source, to move as One and to move as that which blesses all. Each one is involved in a movement of multiple impact and meaning and each one is moving accordingly, as they do so come into the mind set of inner guidance, the alignment from the Source. That is the truth there and it is important for people to know. All is moving accordingly as each one opens up to the peace of their being and listens with intention. I am with you there, always.

Chapter 22

The trips were refreshing to the couple. Throughout the year, the trips were taken, and were thoroughly enjoyed there. The children kept asking their parents on visits home, “Have you found the perfect place yet?” But nothing had stood out for the couple as the perfect place. But we continued there to encourage the couple to seek for their place of respite and let it be found as they were open to receive. Now the days of writing continued for John and he found a renewed sense of mission there. For the works were coming forth easily and effortlessly. They were filled with the good news of connection and the joy of loving relationship. Kara continued to do occasional substitute teaching and found the time to continue her Yoga and care for her beloved home and gardens which had been so carefully planned and lived in throughout the years.

As the time for Christmas arrived all the children were planning on being home. Kara enjoyed the preparations, the buying of gifts and the baking and general hospitality that was experienced during the holidays. The couple again found themselves planning get-togethers with family and friends. John had decided that a reunion of his high school friends was in order and with delight, all were available to attend with their wives and children. John found that each of them had continued to seek guidance in their daily decisions and each had felt abided with there. They recalled the early days when they had first heard John speaking through and what a significant time that had been for them. Each in his own profession, had sought guidance, and had felt that the counsel was invaluable to them. I had lived in the hearts and minds of these dear ones, and together, we had found the true path for each one. There had been so much that had happened in each life and had truly been dealt with appropriately as each one had joined with me. For I saw the big picture, the view from the transcendent, and I gave guidance accordingly.

The children and spouses of the four had been impacted and had learned of guidance and the availability of direct relationship. Many had chosen to live this way and had found the truth of life there. As the Christmas season passed, John and Kara thanked me for all that had brought to them such joy over the last few weeks. Now as the winter days were felt, the couple again returned to their hopes of finding a retreat place and decided to return to Hawaii. For the gentle nature of the people and the beauty and serenity there was captivating to them. We encouraged this and we led the couple to seek here again.

Now it so happened that there was residing on the island, an elderly man who had now chosen to return to the mainland, to the States, to live with his daughter, for his health was failing and he knew the time of death was near. He had loved his ocean-side home and had wanted to stay there until the end. But his desire to be with his daughter was great and so he had let that be the most important thing for him.

The home was situated back away from the water and was open to the sound of the sea and the surf. It was on a private spit which jutted out somewhat and was surrounded by trees and the lay of the land which prevented the view of other houses or people. It was idyllic in many ways. The home was built in the style of a central courtyard or lanai with rooms around three sides leading out to it. The court yard itself was facing the ocean and the smell of tropical flowers filled the air and the beauty of it was a marvel to behold.

It was on a ride around the island that the couple saw the sign leading into the property. Kara and John drove through the long winding road with curiosity. As they surveyed the house tucked neatly into the trees, but open to the water, their hearts leaped with joy, for they felt instantly, that this was the home they had been looking for. As the house had only recently come on the market, they were one of the first ones to see it. They walked around the grounds and came upon the old man who had been in the gardens tending his plants. He looked at them and felt an instant knowing himself, that this was the couple who should own his beloved house. Now he was willing to show them through, and as they talked they developed a rapport with each other. He offered them coffee and as they shared with each other their lives, they told him of their love of Jesus and their devotion to following guidance.

Now the old man also knew Jesus and had found that his decisions were best made after prayer, and that the peace he felt always after doing that was profound. He now felt that peace as he talked openly with John and Kara about his sickness, his daughter in the States, and his knowing that his end was near. The old man then called the realtor who met John and Kara at his office and the transaction was completed. How happy the couple was as they planned for all the details in establishing this home, this retreat center. They thanked those of us working with them on the spiritual plane for the obvious right place for them. We here, delighted in this, and we knew that the home would be enjoyed by all the children, by other family members, and by many friends of the couple. As the sun set that night and as the couple walked along the ocean beach they felt the deepest peace of their being and the happiness of true contentment. We here, felt joy, and we here, felt their happiness. Now the delight was shared by all and many who were working with them rejoiced that night.

The Hawaiian experience and the prospect of spending some part of each year there brought joy to the couple, for they were eager to get to know their new surroundings and their acquaintances. John felt that the island would offer a respite from the frequent calls and demands that were made on him and he relished the idea of quiet and meditative time. The couple decided that the months of January, February and March would be spent in Hawaii, and that the island retreat would be available to others during the rest of the year. For the friends and relatives who heard of this were eager and excited to experience it, too. And in the spirit of gifting, which was the way of John and Kara, the offer to extend hospitality was made. We here, were joyful at the new place of peace for the couple, and as the time of return to the island was felt, the couple eagerly looked forward to being again in their new home.

The couple was feeling somewhat in awe of the whole situation, for it had happened so easily for them, and the outcome had been so perfect. Now the days in their new-found home were delightful. Kara found that the pace of her life slowed down tremendously and there was time for naps in the afternoon if she so desired and also time to walk and enjoy the sea with its tranquil melody softly playing out. The breezes, which were a part of the island experience, were wonderful and felt refreshing to the couple. I encouraged them to adopt a casual attitude in attire and in structure so they would feel the spontaneous movement of spirit as they did so live there. And so the activities which they undertook were usually done on the spur of the moment and were spontaneously felt as right for them. This joyous movement of spontaneous living brought a youthful vigor to the couple and each day was looked forward to with eagerness.

Now one day the couple decided to attend a ceremony of the native people there and they were brought into a greater understanding of the Hawaiian culture. The gentle people and the customs of honoring each other and nature and bringing a sacred reverence to life as it is lived was now abundantly seen in this island paradise. Kara and John felt humbled as they turned inward to thank me. We here, were delighted in the joy of this couple and in the new-found friendships that were developing. We encouraged them to now see the broader spectrum of life there and see the way a people can live in harmony. The island was becoming a place of real rest and relaxation and the couple found that they were brought to a new invigoration there. Simple eating of natural foods with plenty of fruit and vegetables and the drinking of pure water was part of the life style they had there. John felt sad to see the time there over so quickly, but knew they would return again in the winter months. And now it was time to go home to their farm in the States and to resume the activities of spring and the rekindling of friendships at home.

Chapter 23

We here, who were working with the couple, now felt that we could focus again with John and his important work there. We knew that the books he was writing and the information he was sharing was invaluable to the awakening there. Many who read the books were transformed, for they gained the knowing of inner guidance and the availability of real help there. We here, were eager to share more with John, and so we began an intense period of guided and deliberate work there to share more fully with others. We were intent on giving John information about the transcendent reality of life and we eagerly looked for opportunities there.

Now the work was progressing nicely and the guidance was being heard. Of greatest importance to John and to the ones who would read his work, was this understanding of the availability of guidance that is truly there at the slightest invitation of the one asking. The slightest desire to hear will be met there with guidance, and so there is no long and arduous method nor means to access this realm, this friendship there. It is in believing and accepting this that the truth of it is validated to that one.

We here, are working with the earnestness of close family members, to all of you there on the earth plane. We are eager to have you know us and to incorporate us into your lives. For the gifts of relationship are the greatest gifts that can be had there. Not in money, nor in pleasurable events, nor in culturally acclaimed means, can true happiness be found, but in the turning inward and abiding with inner guidance, with the transcendence, can the fullness be felt and known.

We here, urge you to quiet your mind set and listen with intention and allow for that knowing, that still small voice to be heard. You must trust that it is there and you must validate this with the experience for yourself. Do not hesitate to try and do not be disheartened if you think you hear nothing. For it is in the quiet and persistent turning inwards. and the believing, that the truth will come forth for you.

Now John was ready to receive, for he had countless experiences of guidance leading him to the answers which benefited all, which got him through situations that seemed impossible, and which gave him the greatest joy to experience. It was in the peaceful knowing of the surety of love that John felt his security. For he now felt the presence of those who were with him, working with him mightily. I loved this one and I wanted him to know fully his true standing in the multidimensional Oneness of life. And so we worked with him and we gave him all that he needed to go ahead, to move forward and to gain the fulfillment, ever unfolding anew. That was his birthright and that is yours also. And so these words are written in the style of a novel and yet they must bring to you that which is only true.

We now tell you that the words here are the truth, dear one, and are meant for you to embrace and hold as that which will move you forward, lovingly and joyfully forward. You are much more there! Do not let the tides of time, the culturally driven mind set that is impelled into you on a daily basis mislead you into a false sense of reality, for you are much more!! Truly, you are much more there! Never alone are you. As this book is truly meant to be for you an invitation and a book of guidance, it is given so that you can find fully, your truth there. Let in the truth of life, that you are not alone there ever. Let in and allow for the joining to be felt. Now we will return to the story, for there is more to tell of John and his family and his gifting.

Chapter 24

I will tell you that the story continues with this couple and with the mission there. Now the story will change for it will show to its readers what the results of the work John is doing will bring. For the results will be felt multidimensionally. Soon, as John and other's work is given, and as people begin to offer their wills over to guidance to work with, a new beginning will be felt on the earth plane.

For as the mind set of the ego is released and as the enculturated way is forgone, new and remarkable occurrences will occur. Mankind will venture into the multidimensional realms and this will be felt by all. Soon, the nature of existence will be known as that which is a function of the Creator and the will of the Source. Soon, life will be understood as the ongoing meaning of existence and the valuing of it will be most evident. For we will see the beauty in each and every aspect of the created worlds. We will see the divine nature of all things and we will cherish all as ourselves.

For it is in this deep cherishing and valuing that the joy of life will stream forth from each one, radiant in the beauty of relationship. Now the bounteous melody of love will usher forth, streaming with it acts of deep kindness and unspeakable gloriousness. The time is near and will not be that which is endlessly away from reality, for it is here to enjoy now as we open up to our true nature, our Oneness with the Source.

We are meant to be living, vibrating, beings of love, replete with the Wholeness, carrying the entirety within, and able always to open up to understand and receive and to give. Now as these words are not that which have a great deal of meaning yet for you, for they sound as that which has been said before and as that which is wishful thinking, let me assure you that they are true.

John and the many who have opened up are indeed, harbingers of what is to come there. Now do not feel that you are alone in your life, nor are you without the way made plain for you. The way is through the abiding with of relationship with your Allness, with me, and with the multidimensional nature of you. And so the work that the many are involved in is of the utmost importance there.

John knew it and so did Kara and so did the millions who read his works, and who were so moved to receive. As the masses open up, the effect of the masses will move the rest to understand, and the great awakening will occur. Many will be released from the pain and isolation of living without meaning and many will be released from the suffering of sickness and the pain of the culture gone awry.

Let us then take the story here seriously and let us then proclaim together what is worthy of sharing, most worthy. That we are One, now and forever. We are, indeed, One. Let in and allow dear one, truly let in and allow. We are, indeed, One.

Chapter 25

John and Kara soon understood that as they listened and as they followed the perfect unfolding would occur and as they lived their life they turned often to their inner guidance. The joy they experienced was truly that of their Wholeness, for they were moving and abiding with all who were working there with them. We here, found what we had given them to be that which was most appropriate. We found that the words of guidance and the inner knowing that was imparted to them was felt as the correct movement for us as well.

You see, each and every one has as his/her context, a much greater universality and those that benefit from the correct movement are multiple. Never isolated and never without help are our fellow brothers and sisters there. We love you and we are ready always to impart to you what is needed there. Our investment is in your fulfillment and is in your coming into the perfect way there. And so we delight in you as you turn to us for your movement there. We see the whole context of what you are involved in and we can guide you accordingly. It is as you do so listen and follow that you are blessed.

John and Kara experienced this again and again. They based their security on their inner guidance and in the ongoing relationship that was now a part of their lives. So much a part that the thought of acting without turning inward was unthinkable. The couple did not hesitate to act as they learned of the right-knowing and the forward movement that became clear to them. It was truly the walking together with guidance that made the way plain. As the journey moved forward and as problems occurred, always they were faced with the loving assistance and inner guidance that we provided. Together, we moved in life, and together, we overcame and surmounted what came into view. But the journey was mostly about the joy of relationship. It was about our peace and joy that was felt so abundantly each day. We delighted in our relationship and as the couple so followed, we were fulfilled.

However, there came into view now, as the couple had settled back home after a period of retreat in Hawaii, a time of what could be called, stasis. This time was characterized by a sense of lack of movement and a falling back into the old ways of focusing on the security of money and things and the need to fill life with movies and television and certain intriguing but hollow activities. It was a time of forgetting. During this time there was a certain involvement with superficiality that temporarily seemed fulfilling. The constant activities and focusing on the fame and the media involvement filled the days and nights.

It was not long though, before the couple faced each other and wondered how the meaning had seemed to go out of life, and they wondered how the emptiness had crept in. As they looked at each other, they wondered if their marriage was at some sort of stand still and as each one looked at the other they wondered what life without the other would be like. The call to be involved with other people from the media and from the social life that had developed left little time to be together and to focus on the needs of the other.

Kara soon began to feel sick in a way she had not known before. She came down with a cough that persisted and would not leave, even with medicine and rest. John was concerned about her but it was not until he realized his energy level had fallen and his need for rest had increased that he noticed that both of them had changed. As they spent more time at home resting and recuperating from their illnesses and their fatigue, John took stock of what had happened to them. Now they felt within them the call to turn inward. Here, in the quiet of each one's heart, we worked with them and laid out to them what had happened.

With earnestness, John and Kara, each in their own way, held my hand and together, we embraced in the love as each one returned to guidance. The joy that filled each of them was felt here and as the social life was let go of and as the return to guidance was embraced, the health and vitality to the couple and the love of each other returned. Now the couple realized how important it was to be vigilant in guidance and to be vigilant in declaring their relationship, for the ego defense system of each one had kicked in mightily and had attempted to undermine the peace and the tranquility of each one. For the dissatisfaction that the ego imparted with the current situation was a strategy often used to bring about the reinforcement of the wily defense system which is embedded in each one, as he /she has lived from separation. As the ego was dismissed as inconsequential, and as the peace and joy of relationship was embraced, we moved lovingly together and with the joy of relationship.

The call now was to continue with the wonderful work of sharing the good news. And John, with renewed vigor and renewed commitment, turned to the computer and to our relationship to write the next work. Kara felt the joy of our relationship too, and felt her health revitalized as she returned to the joys of hearth and home. Simply, the couple turned to each other and recommitted their vows of love and fidelity to each other, and to their inner guidance, to me, and to our partnership. The vibrancy that occurred in this couple was palpable and the joy and peace in the household was significant.

Our work with John took on the added ingredient of increased intention and commitment which furthered the work and accelerated the progress. Now we instructed John to bring the news of redemption to the people, for many had fallen away who had previously been close and so the need to feel redeemed and forgiven was great. The need to feel closely loved and abided with was great and the need to feel secure in the arms of divine love was paramount there. And so we worked on The Call For Redemption and this book was soon ready to be published and distributed. The Call For Redemption was widely embraced and many were brought back into guidance as they read this.

Chapter 26

As John and Kara continued in their loving connection to me, I told them of the wonderful things that were held in store for them. For they were now ready for a time of increased and marvelous unfolding of what could be called their awakening into the fourth dimensional world, the spiritual plane. We were ready to gift them with further and deeper understanding of what they were involved in on the other planes of existence.

Now this was a time of rapid releasing of their understanding of what the world was and what the Father was and what their relationship was to it. For they understood that their role in the greater scheme, the greater unfolding of things, was immense. For they were part of a group of ones, who had now given to the world the truth and the sacred way to live. They were a part of the group who had together on the spiritual side, determined that they would work diligently to attend to the needs of the planet and to the awakening of all who were still sleeping. John felt now, that his gifts were indeed, that which had left an imprint, had made a headway in the dispelling of all that was so illusionary there.

The couple was given insights into the divine nature of existence, and as they so understood, they were enlarged and expanded in their knowing of the truth of the multidimensional nature of life. I was working with them and I now told them of the change that was about to occur there. The times were ready for a change that would usher in a new beginning and a time when all would know that they were indeed, connected. This time was soon to be, and it was as the couple felt the impendingness of this, that they gave heartily to others and to all who came into their lives.

And so the good news was spread and the couple was enriched as they did so abide with the guidance and the love here. We here, wanted to let them know that they were joined with there and that they were not alone in their work. And so we would come to them in the evening, at night when they were sleeping, and tell them of our participation with them.

As they awoke in the morning they would feel refreshed and ready for the day as they had been so nourished with our life the night before. We worked with them and we let them know that their work was all important. They understood this and so the work took on an eminence to them. They understood that they were doing the most important thing that they could be doing and the need was to persevere there. To persevere and to persist in the work, not to tire, not to become indolent, and not to become weary. Nothing was more important than what they were involved in and so the work involved most of their time and most of their days. Willingly and diligently they worked and brought the good news to millions there. The joy they felt was truly the joy of a couple feeling their Wholeness.

Now as these words are given to you to hear and as you have come this far in reading this story, I will tell you that the work that the couple was involved in is work that all can do as they so open up to receive. The call is being made here to you who are reading this book. The call is being made to you to open up to your guidance, and to ask what part you play here. For each one who has opened up is there for a purpose and each one who has opened up is ready to give the gifts he/she has to give as they find what is so lovingly there. Now is the time to ask in a quiet way for the answer to your questing, now is the time. I am here for you, too, and I love you and will abide with you as you do so ask me in. Never alone dear one, truly, never alone.

Chapter 27

Now the time for giving the gifts was coming to a close, for the couple would have only a short while left to remain on the earth plane. It was a time to finish the work and to complete what had been started. We, who knew the movement of the couple and the events that would suddenly end their lives, were giving them the time necessary to complete all that had been started. For it was as the couple let go of the finished work and released it into the world and as the couple saw the gifts received and the results of the lifetime of connection that the movement away from this plane would happen.

We were earnest in our desire to give this couple the taste of fulfillment there. And we wanted them to know that their lives had been most meaningful to the Earth and those of us here who had been working with them, that the work that they had engaged in had implications far beyond what they knew. For the work was that which opened the hearts and minds of many and allowed for the indwelling spirit within to come forth mightily. Not in the outward appearances but in the recesses of the heart and mind was the gift felt most importantly. As the couple finished the last book and as they set about to return to Hawaii for their retreat they were filled with an eerie sense of completion. As if this would be the last time they would go through the routines of closing up the country home and saying good-bye to the children. It was an eerie feeling and a feeling of bidding farewell which took on meaning that had never been felt so strongly before now.

The children, who at this time were well on their way to adult independence, sensed the somewhat different quality about this good-bye and wondered amongst themselves why this was. I had given the couple what could be called forewarning or precognition about the events that were to follow and told them that their lives would be held in loving embrace, that the call for them was to continue on with their planned trip to their retreat center and to feel the sense of completion that was so rightly deserved. Now the plane that met with the violent storms over the Pacific went down, and was unable to be seen from the air 'til morning. The passengers all perished and as John and Kara left their bodies and departed into the spiritual plane they were met with a welcoming crowd who now embraced them heartily and a grand reunion was had.

For the lives of these two people would continue on and would be brought into further mission as they so decided with their counselors how to proceed. I shared with my two dear friends, the joy I had over my relationship with them, while they were sojourning on the three dimensional plane, and we talked about all the things that had transpired. I told them of the significance of their work and the ongoing meaning that opened up as they so witnessed.

The couple was concerned about their children and as they were able to see them in mourning they were moved to want to return to comfort them. Now the call for the couple was to allow for the work of the Holy Spirit within each one to comfort them and to encourage them to not mourn but to go on and live a full life, each one. And so, we were with the children as they cried over the loss of their beloved parents, who had been such a profound influence on them. The days of sadness lessened as the children each took up their lives again, and vowed to carry on with the spirit of connection that Mother and Dad had so deeply within them.

As this story has now come to a close and as the meaning that was meant by telling you this has been given, I would now further explore with you something which will be helpful for you to understand. Let us now turn our attention to what that is as the story continues.

Chapter 28

Now let us proceed with a continuation of the story which has apparently ended but which continues still. For the couple has died. The couple has left the earth plane and now is living a life of spirit. What are they doing there and how are their lives unfolding? As the couple left the earth plane they were embraced and they were reunited with their spiritual family. They felt the love which was there for them and they understood that they had returned and were now putting the pieces of their experience together. They understood that they had fulfilled the promise made, to give the gift of spiritual guidance to those they met while there.

Now as they have returned and as they have come into a time of contemplation, they are ready to embark on a further journey into the work of the One, the Source, the Allness there. Their counselors have given them an outline of what they see as their next mission, the way to increase the unfolding of mankind into its knowing, its knowledge of who and what it is. Kara has decided that her life will be as one who comes again to the earth plane and who will now be a further along one, a more awakened one, who can give more directly as she lives. Her gifts will involve teaching children, but will be that life which is now in another land, a place far from America, a place of deep need there. She will be born in Africa, and will be a member of a wealthy family who will see to her education and to her growth there. She has chosen a time and place and a situation that will best allow her to give her gifts.

John has taken longer to decide his next gifting, for he has wondered if he is ready to go back so soon or if further time on the spiritual dimension would allow him to prepare for what he is to do next. For he has chosen to undertake a life that will certainly require much courage and much determination. He will be born into a time of great conflict in America, a time when the need to be in step with the leading powers and to relinquish personal rights is the expectation. He will be placed in a family who is under surveillance for their religious beliefs and their firmness in following the inner guidance of spirit. For the work that John will be engaged in will be the work of breaking through the quagmire of the cultural world view that is now holding religious ideology as detrimental to the powerful needs of the institutions and conglomerates that have arisen and who are the chief powers there.

This lifetime of earth incarnation will be John's last, for his awakening will be fully experienced. His life will unfold after that as a spiritual being, working from the plane of the unseen, to bring about the lifting of illusion from mankind.

To further enlighten you about what happens after you leave the earth plane let me share with you more. You see, this place is truly not separate from the world you see and the world you live in. In all ways, the spiritual plane is right there, right there to know, as you do so live. And so as you leave the physical remains of the body and as you move out into your spiritual body or your light body, you will find yourselves in a dimension where you see the world as you have known it, but you see it as one who cannot interact in the same way.

Many who depart have not learned of the multidimensional way and find themselves at a loss for what to do or how to proceed. When the decision to find the way is made, we help that one come into the truth of his/her situation and offer an explanation that one is able to understand from his/her development at that time.

Life then continues on. The same consciousness, the same identity, the same understanding is had by that one. I am telling you this so that you will not delay finding out, expressing curiosity, about your spiritual nature, your awakening process, while you are still there. There is no need to postpone your seeking mind set, for we are more than willing to help you now. You see, your choice to separate from the Father, was a choice which was made as you thought that you would experience your own understanding, your own way. And this was interesting and seemed powerful to you. You thought that the way of doing your own thing was what would lead to excitement, adventure, and new discoveries.

Here was a time of exploration. The ingrained habit of living from separation became firmly entrenched around your globe and the consequences of this were felt individually and globally. Fear, which was now a concomitant feeling enlarged, and defenses to fend off the fearful things were developed. Psychological defenses literally walled off people from experiencing their god-given trust in a world of goodness and fulfillment. Such turmoil was had as a result of this.

Now the time to let go of the defenses and to begin turning inward is at hand. Do not delay dear one, do not delay. For the time to let go of the wall of the defense, the blindness to who and what you are, is now. You are much more. Together, we can uncover the life you are meant to live, and come into communion. I am here for you and I love you.

Chapter 29

As the two have departed and as the review of the life experience has been had, the couple now have a new mission to complete. They have reviewed and they have decided on what would allow for the greatest gifting to be had as they reincarnate again. They have felt the understanding of their previous lifetime and have now come into a greater realization of the truth of who and what they are. Their purpose has been felt and their renewal of vows to complete the mission has been made. Now they are about to undertake what they have chosen, and they have allowed for input, for counsel, from those others who are working there with them. They have given to their counselors their intention and their desire to work diligently to bring about the greater awakening of mankind into his completeness, his wholeness there, and they have committed their lives to this. As they have so committed, they have allowed for the infilling of their divine self, their real self to come forth, and they have felt the congruence, the rightness of this. Their lives have been meaningful to them and to others and will continue to so be that which gifts the planet as is the intention of the Source.

Gifting then, is what the nature of the Source is. Gifting, through the acts of love and kindness, and through the awareness of the wholeness, the fullness of the created world. The gifts of relationship with the Creator is perhaps the greatest gift given, for it is the ongoing nature of life to be in connection with the Source of that life, and in this is completion felt and known.

Now as you have read this it is time to examine your own life right there, right now. It is time to reflect on your mission as you have agreed to before you came, this time, to the earth plane. For you too, made a promise. You too, made a commitment and decided about the time, the place, and the circumstances of your life. The world has imposed its limited viewpoint and the cultural input has shaped you there. Have you felt the incompleteness of this way of life? Have you felt the meaninglessness of the way the separated world sees itself?

Now for you is an opportunity to choose again for the way of connection. It is never too late and it is never without the strengthening love and guidance right within your very being. I am there for you dear one, I truly am there for you, and I want so much for you to know me as your dear friend and your constant companion. For I have gifting for you as my good pleasure. I have gifts and fulfillment beyond measure there for you.

Now let us unite as One and let us follow the inward workings of our co-joined heart. Let us not put the love of the Father aside as insignificant, and let us not turn to the cultural viewpoint as our means of fulfillment. For you will be empty and you will feel the hollowness as you proceed there. The accumulation of things, and of money and of ego gratifications, will not usher in the peace that you so yearn for. These things, though in and of themselves are not bad, are truly that which ring empty to the heart. For it is in relationships and in the ongoing turning inward to see the truth, that the fullness, the truth can be experienced.

I urge you to listen with intention to your inner guidance. Do not think that the still small voice you hear is an illusion there. Do not think that the love you feel as you do so turn here is illusory, for it is love that is transforming to you. Now the time to commit to curiosity and to further exploration is now. The time to open up to receive is now, dear one. For you are held dearly, in my heart. I await your joining with me, and I await the love which you are to become fully known to you.

We together, can move with the miracle mindedness which will transform you there. We together, will change the way of the limited mind set, as we do so together, allow for the divine movement of life to calm the storms of chaos so greatly felt there. Now is the time to live the life of a being in connection and to understand who and what you are. And so I urge you, as one would urge a beloved, to turn inward. I will not leave you here alone and I will not forsake you. We are inextricably bound there and we are indeed, One. Let these words be heard now as you find them so lovingly spoken, within. We will now proceed to further exploration of your divine self.

Chapter 30

Who are you? Is your life that which has abiding meaning? For you are truly a being of significance to the Wholeness, the Allness, the Source there and as you are able to understand, than you will have the right evaluation of your worth and your significance. Now it is something to take note of. It is something to reaffirm daily or perhaps many times a day. For as the words sink into your deeper consciousness, you will then find the increased value of each one. For none are left out. None are forgotten there. Each one, each created being is a part of that same Wholeness, and is of inextricable value, for it is in cherishing the Whole, that the blessings can be felt.

We are meant to be that which lives from the place of love. Now what does this mean in practical, every day terms? Well, it means that as you go about your daily life you abide with the spirit within and turn there for the input as to how to live. In the most minute decisions of life, the spirit of truth is there to guide you. And it is in the resounding rightness of this that you will continue on. For you will feel the rightness, the purposefulness, and the fulfillment, as you do so live from this reality of you.

Now the need to find that connection is real and should not be dismissed, dear one. The need to find that place of correct input, true transmission, and righteous receiving should be explored with diligence. You will find, as you do so commit, and as you do so persevere. Now it is not difficult, but it does require a diligence and a perseverance that can be cultivated as you let go of the striving mind set and the thinking mind set which would belittle the idea as superstitious or wishful thinking. You must trust that what you are doing, are engaged in, is of great value, and you must persist in the quieting of your busy mind set and the asking in of your spiritual guidance. Your guide is there and your own right mind, the holy spirit within is there and I am there to guide you. We are a Wholeness and we are not separateness. And yet there is identity of each one. Not in a conglomeration or loss of identity, but in claiming the true identity and in claiming the way of the Creator, the Source, are you brought into your right mind and your forward movement. We are One, dear one, truly we are One. Now you can count on this, for it is really the truth. Let these words be heard within, and let them not be dismissed there. Now we will further explore a situation that you may come up against as you do so turn inward. That is the next chapter, so let us proceed onward there.

Chapter 31

As you allow for the movement of connection, there will be several things that will confront you. First, you will find that you are often persuaded to give in to the movement of ego there, the movement of the historical, the familiar way. And this for a time will feel comfortable in its familiarity. But soon you will sense the discomfort, for you will feel the boredom, the lack of forward movement and the depression which often accompanies the ego ways. Now the call for you will be to turn again to your guidance for the next step to extricate yourself from the habitual way of responding to your circumstances. Small steps away from the enculturated way will be felt and these will be freeing for you.

Another trap you will get into is the confrontation by others who have found your new-found way to be threatening to the comfort they have found with you in the old ways. These ones will try to convince you directly and indirectly to abandon your turning inward and will attempt to persuade you to join them in the familiar and tried ways. But, dear one, though you may love the ones who try to persuade you and are bound to them through relationship or kindred blood, you must truly challenge their call to come back to the old ways.

Now it is not in abandoning friends, but it is in opening up to spirit, that true friendships can be made. And so I urge you not to think badly of these ones, but to commit to your path, your connection to inner guidance, to me there. We are One and the searching mind set of inner connection is the mind set to maintain.

Now you will be faced also, with the perpetual need to ask often of our togetherness. Many times during the day you may ask, for you are letting go of an old way to think and be, and you must have verification again and again, to feel the certitude of this way. Now I can tell you that your persistence will be felt and the movement of inner guidance that will lovingly bring you forward into your feeling of Wholeness, Completeness will be felt. As you move lovingly to the tune of our connection, bit by bit or in large leaps will your illusions be released. And as you feel into our relationship, the sweet accompaniment of the dearest nature, will be felt. So right will feel your world, your life. And the miracle mindedness that you experience will be felt in the everyday events of your life, that now seem as miracles, as the perfect unfolding occurs.

I can tell you that in all areas of your life, am I concerned and willing to guide you. Some of the things that you are involved with will drop away as no longer important and others will take on greater importance. You will find a simplification of experience and you will delight in this. The freedom to have as your advisor the transcendent One, the Holy spirit within, will delight you and be felt as inviable or without cause for losing faith. The true nature of you will come forth, dear one.

What wonderful news this is, for now you will have the lifeline which will carry you forward, through the times ahead. You have the answer to your questing as you have found the guidance so naturally there and so lovingly there for you. I would encourage each one of you to come forth with your cares and your concerns. Come forth with your guilt and your remorse and find the innocence, the way to live there, that will be truly nurturing for you. Now this is the truth, dear one. I would encourage you to find that quiet place within where you can bring to bear on your life circumstances, divine wisdom, love and intelligence. Not in one-upping your others there, but in showing them the truth about you and about them will the joy be felt. In the every day movement in which you are now living will the perfect outcome to all your circumstances be felt. As this chapter comes to a close, let us turn inward and lovingly find anew the friend there. I am there for you and I do love you. Now is the time.

Chapter 32

You are divine. You are the direct inheritors of the Source. You have the Wholeness, the Allness as your substrate, your foundational reality there. Now these words are words that are meant to bring you into an awareness that is truly life changing. For you see yourselves as so fragile and frail, so vulnerable to the ebb and flow of life circumstances. Now this way of viewing yourself leads you to create fabrications of how to proceed in life. Your sense of fallibility and the chances, the probabilities of fatal error, seem ever there to haunt you, to force you to devise ways to cope. Strategies to ameliorate the suffering, the potential for great harm. And so safety precautions have been put in place and have been accepted world wide as that which are important to protect yourselves. Of these, the greatest is the need to dismiss life as something transient and short, the need to down play the significance of life. For as life becomes that which is snuffed out like a candle, the impermanence and the transience appear so very real.

The consequence of this transient view is a desire to have the fullest life experience possible, while still here, still alive, and this appears to be the way the masses are now leading their lives. For the desire to fulfill the material needs and the physical needs seem so important there, to equip your children and your others with strategies to gain the needed experiences to have a full life. The result of this is a plan of getting educated and earning a living which will provide much financial gain and much protection from the vicissitudes which befall you.

Now the constant reinforcement of this and the pummeling of this into the people by the media and the culture of consumerism have created a false idea of the reality of you. You are different than that, much different. Your life is first of all, priceless, of infinite value. You were created from the beginning and are an expression, a created expression of the Father/Mother God, the Source of All There Is. Your identity is known and your movement is held within the mind of your Creator. Within you, is the place of direct connection, the spirit of truth, which is who and what you are.

Now as you have felt the pressure from the culture to conform in the most minute details of life, you are brought into a place of servitude, for you no longer feel the joy of a life lived with the freedom to create anew. You are held in a highly routinized and predictable set of circumstances that often bring with them a life of conformity. Now I would encourage you to let go of the mind set of enculturation and let your life be felt as that which is free to live in accordance with the way your Maker, your Creator would have you live it. You are meant to be a direct expression there, dear one, a movement of living love held in the safety and protection of your Source.

Now as you hear this let your mind open up to wonder, to curiosity, to question how it is that you can experience the truth of you? How it is that you can embrace who you really are and allow for the movement of beauty, of love and of transformational unfoldment to happen, to occur. You must ask without reservation and with intention to hear, for it is as you ask with the intention of a true seeker that the way will be made plain for you. You must truly ask dear one, and not allow for the enculturated way to shut out the truth of you.

Do not allow for the closing down of your intention or the putting off to find the fulfillment that is yours to be had. Open up to receive for I am with you there. I am with you there and I will show you the way. I will show you the way dear one, truly I will show you the way. Now quiet your conditioned thinking and let your mind set empty out. Feel into the quiet and ask for your guides presence to be made known to you. I am there and I will hear you and I will speak with you as you do so allow for it. Truly, in whatever way suits you, by writing, by listening or by talking openly, I will answer you. You must trust into here and you can truly count on my abiding presence there. As this chapter closes, let us together find our relationship of permanence, the divinity of you and the sacred life that you are engaged in. I love you. This is the truth.

Chapter 33

Together always. I can tell you as the book continues, that you are not alone there, and I can tell you that our togetherness continues without ceasing. Now the wonderful fact of our togetherness, should bring to you, joy, for it is this knowledge that will be so freeing for you, as you do so live. So, as you are faced with the vicissitudes of your life, you can count on my involvement with you as you do so open up to invite in this relationship of such profound significance.

Together, we will find the perfect next step to take, as you are faced with the life challenges that are there as a result of the separated mind set. Together, we will face the future, and together, will bring to bear on your situation, the ordering movement of divine love. Now the energy of living love is that very energy which puts all things in order, makes the wrong right, and places the movement of your life into the hands of your Source. Now you can move, knowing that you are met with divine guidance there.

Now you can find the joy of relationship that far surpasses the joy you have felt as you have moved apart or as you have found as a separated entity. I would encourage you to quiet your mind set, turn lovingly here to me and ask for our relationship to be felt or known. I will not disappoint you and I will not leave you without the evidentiary occurrences, the inner movement being felt there. Do not think that you are ever without that relationship, so in the easiest of times and in the hardest of times you can turn here, for I will be there. In the still quiet place of the sacred heart, I am there for you.

Let this brief chapter on the place of our togetherness and the joy of our relationship bring you into that quest to experience it. I love you and that is the truth of it.

Chapter 34

As we continue with the book and as we focus on the quiet place of our joining, let me share with you what will become so evidentially true for you. For you will begin the movement into the greater Wholeness, the fullness of whom you are. What this means is that you will now feel the divine movement of your being as it resonates to the truth that comes forth for you. You will now have the knowing, the know how, to continue on with the unfolding of your life's mission there. For I will guide you directly. I will bring you into the truth of your being, the forward movement that will feel so right for you, and will feel so invigorating in its life enhancing movement.

Here, in the quiet place of your awareness, is where we together, will explore your next steps. Here, in the quiet place of our joining, we will uncover that mission which you decided to undertake as you did so incarnate here again. Only as you follow that which you have intended, will your true happiness be felt. Only in the quiet place of the inner life will your relationship of magnificence be fully known for you. And so as you hear this, the call is to let your worries be put aside now and turn quietly into the place of innocence where we are together. Let your inner worries be felt as truly that which will be let go of as you understand the true nature of who you are. And in the smallest things and in the great decisions of life, you will know the way.

We here, are ready to assist you, dear one. We are ready to give you what you need to move forward there, to gain your peace and your joy. For as you do understand the fullness of you and the spiritual dimension of you, you will gain the needed insight to allow for your life to unfold perfectly. Now these are not idle words, dear one. These are not words that will be useless to you. No, these words are the beacon of truth for you. Now the call is to turn inward and quiet your thinking mind set and open up to receive and as you do so let in we will give you the indications of our presence with you. And so the choice is yours to follow or to disregard. But the relationship, the truth of your being is there now to enjoy and to experience, so why not open up? Why not extend the invitation to accept the truth of your being there?

There is no harm that will befall you here, only the bliss of finding the truth of you. I am extending this invitation to you, dear one, for a reason, and that reason is that you are loved so dearly, and you are cared about so much that we would not leave you there without a way to return home, to return to your right mind. For a beloved bears all things with his lover and a beloved would not let a loved one vanquish in the emptiness of isolation and meaninglessness. No, the beloved would stay with his/her beloved and would keep offering the love and the solace there. And so I am here for you. I am here for you dear one, and I do love you. A message of love and entreatment to open up to receive and a confirmation of the truth. So this is what I offer in this writing. Now as this chapter comes to a close let us find together, that relationship of magnificence . We are One dear one, truly we are One.

Chapter 35

You are at a crossroads point in your life, for you have felt the infilling of spirit there and you have responded to it. You are at point of change there, for you are ready to find anew, the joy of our relationship. I can tell you that you are indeed at a crossroads, for you are faced with the need to make choices in your life and the choices will bring you into one or another direction. As you are now faced with the experiential truth of the spirit world there, you are given the means to find a way that will be infinitely more satisfying to you. You are given a means to bring to bear on your life, the inner guidance from the transcendent. What a joy this will be for you as you find such a road map available for your journey and such a travelling partner!

Now as you embrace fully this new- found relationship, and as you open up to receive, you will walk into a way that is filled with hope and renewal. For the way of the inner life is indeed, that which is hopeful and in all ways constantly coming into newness. Such joy this will be for you!

Now do not turn away from this and do not think that the words here are trite and superficial fluff. For indeed, the words here are the very truth of existence. They are words that are meant to give you a far-reaching sense of purpose and mission. They are words that are meant to bring you into a place of the transcendent as you find such perfection in the unfolding.

Now this does not mean that you will be unable to relate to the world, nor does it mean that the necessity to live fully in the everyday life there is not worthwhile. For the small and every day things are what is of the greatest importance to bring to the place of guidance. And so as you engage with your others there and as you are faced with the multitude of needs and desires and as you feel trapped in a life that is meaningless, you can be assured that your life is met with the perfect guidance to bring you to a point of greater knowing, understanding, in what to think and do. Each step will be lovingly met there with a guidance that loves you and cherishes you and has nought but your best interest at heart. For your guide is, in all ways, ready to embrace fully what you are now involved in. I can tell you that your guide is there and I am there and we will see you through the times you are in. Do not be dismayed or disheartened as you turn here and do not give in if at first you feel you are not receiving anything, for it is in the patient and persistent turning inward, that the way will be made known to you. It is in the patient and persistent opening up to receive, that the gifts will be given.

We would urge you not to dismiss this and disregard these words as unimportant or that which is discarded, for they are the lifeline, the lifeblood of existence itself. Do not settle for a way that is empty and separate from who and what you really are. Do not settle for a way that is unenlightened. For you will then be without the means to find real happiness or real truth. Let the forward movement of connection guide you lovingly there.

Now as this chapter comes to a close, I would invite you to quiet your thinking mind set, empty out the place in your mind where you have been consumed with anxiety and find the transmittal line, the place of peace there. I am there for you and I am waiting for our relationship of magnificence to be fully known by you. Never alone, dear one, never alone.

Chapter 36

I am with you as you engage in reading this volume. Now as you sit there I am with you, lovingly here, and inviting you to join me here in the quiet place within. For today is the time to find anew the age-old truth of your existence and the relationship of love held so closely within. Now as you sit there and as you read this, I am abiding within the quiet place of conscious awareness, and giving to you all that you need to find anew our relationship of magnificence.

How is it that I can be there for each one? This question is now addressed in this writing. For it is a question that is often asked and is often misunderstood. You see, dear one, the mind of you is the mind of the Allness, the Wholeness there. The place within that mind, which is the place of transmittal, brings to you the infinite mind of the Source. We here, are aware of you and we are aware of your consciousness. We are at the ready to assist you there, and we are alert for your invitation and your desire to be met with your transcendent reality, the truth of you. We are constantly alert to your needs and your intention as we can see, understand, where you are at this point. We know of your intention and we know of your appeals to have the way made known.

Now the call is to trust into here. The call is to truly trust into and abide within the mind set of the Source. We would encourage you to bring to bear on your life, the relationship which will guide you through the complexity of your life, and the seemingly impossible situations you find yourself in. For the way of the Source is the way of simplicity and forward movement felt as just that. Doable, lovingly and easily doable. Now the key here is to find your peace within. For it is in finding your peace that the quiet and non-conflicted way can be made known to you.

As you sense the knowing and the truth of the situation you find yourself in, you will then take the ideal next step to gently and easily move out into the sublime light of divine relationship and divine forward flowing. And so we would encourage you to not turn away from these pages as that which is unimportant for you and we would encourage you to not settle for a superficial happiness which isn't felt as the very core experience of you. For your very nature is joy and your very nature is peace.

Bring to bear on your life the influx of spirit and the knowing of who and what you are. For indeed, you are the direct inheritor of the Source there. You are the direct and immediate inheritor. Do not think that you must relinquish life on the Earth to find this out, for it is available as you live there, and it is meant to be experienced, always. This is the natural way, the correct way, the intended way, to live. And so, now is the time to turn inward and join. We are here and we love you. You are that same love, given and received. As this chapter on living love and the gift of our presence is given, turn now to the quiet place within, and ask for your guide to be made known to you. Ask and do not turn away, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 37

Let us proceed with what you will find as necessary for your continued unfolding, for what you will find as you continue on, will be roadblocks and impediments there. For you will find that you are drawn into the everyday activities of life lived from the old way and you will be drawn into patterns of living which are, in many ways, patterns of life intent on undermining your peace.

Now how is this life activity which is so habituated, that which is intent on undermining your peace? Well, most of your life activities have been put in place as you have fought to fend off the fear and the isolation you have felt. Most of the activities have been put in place for the immediate gratification of the senses and have become habituated. The substances, the exploits as what is perceived as giving stimulation and excitement, have been put in place to undermine your peace.

You see, you have created as you have left your Source, many defenses or structures that, although not anything other than habit patterns of ingrained ways of behaving, seem as though real, and seem as though important to you. But these defense behaviors, these self-stimulation behaviors, have been truly antithetical to the very heart and soul of you. Your behaviors are that which are not truly coming from the divine intent your Father, your Source, had for you. Now as you feel trapped and as you feel held in the net of habituation, understand that you can free yourself from this. You can let go of the mind-numbing activities that hold you in a place of slavery.

How is it that you can let go and how is it that you can find the freedom of living that is truly so inherent in you? Well, first let me tell you that as you embark on letting go of the old ways, you are not alone. I am with you there and I am working with you to break away to independence from the self-imposed destruction you are engaged in. As you realize that you are met with a loving friend, a counselor there, and as you embrace this friend, you will find a way to let go, to release these numbing and negative habits, the defenses against the truth of you.

We together, will find the way. Each day, each moment, we will be joined there and each moment will be working to bring you into a true understanding of the very truth of you. Now turn here inward. I am here. Quiet your thinking mind set and turn inward, dear one, for you are met with the love of your Source. You are met with the intelligence of your Source and you are met with the know-how to move forward there. Stay close to me. Ask me often what next. Let me share my presence with you and let me show you the love that is there for you. Let us together, walk through the mine fields you are in and come out the other side, whole, complete and free. I am with you, now and always. Let in, dear one, let in.

Chapter 38

What is the meaning of your life? This chapter will give you new insights into that and will shed light on the truth of you. You, right there, are the direct expression of your Source. You there, are the created one who was an idea in the mind of the Creator. Not an incidental, extraneous result of creation but an integral and thought out, a planned, a created aspect of the Wholeness there. You, right there, are the direct expression of the Source, moving and having your being in that Source always. You are a free-willed expression, that which can move and have your being freely.

The meaning the Father has for you as you live is to be the place of love in the world. To be the place where the light of living love comes forth mightily and holds you in its embrace. In you, through you, and as you, does this light of living love shine through and in its purity it brings all into order, loving order there. The meaning you have as you come into the flow of your life's mission, is to be the place of love, intentionally bringing the newness and co-creating with the Father.

As you have read the story of John and Kara and as you have seen the power in their lives of the connection of guidance, you too, can have that same joy, that same connection, and that same forward movement. We would encourage you to not see this as an empty promise, nor deem it as irrelevant, but wholly embrace the news as that which is integral to life. Do not turn your life into a culture-driven and media-driven response, but instead, turn over your life to the stream of life-forming and life-enhancing intelligence from our Source. You are the place where this love comes through and you are the place of the forward flow there. In all ways you are the place.

As you have found that you are infilled with spirit and as you continue to turn your life over to that spirit, you will have the verification time and time again as to what the purpose for your incarnation is. You will feel a pull to explore and discover what the true purpose there is. Now the time to do this is now and the time to fully open up to receive is now. I would encourage each one to take the time necessary to explore the truth of you. Do not let your old habit patterns keep you tied and tethered to a routinized and joyless existence. For you are ready to open up there.

Now we shall look at the role you will play there closely. I will guide you and I will promote within you the necessary steps to take to bring about the awakening of you to your truth. How wonderful this will be and how delightful for you to discover the more of you that is there. Truly delightful will our journey there be. The awareness you will gain as you sense the joy of relationship and the truth of spirit existence will be the joy felt throughout the dimensions as your opening up will bring to all of us, a gleeful rejoicing, as another one finds the truth of life. How happy all will be, to welcome into the spiritual dimension, another one. One who was lost but who now has found the way. How happy we will be here! I am with you as you journey there and I am truly mindful of you as you embark on the discovery of the truth of you. Let in dear one, and allow, for indeed, we are One.

I am with you. Even as you read this, I am with you. This wonderful message of friendship and love is meant to give you the release of your isolation and your sense of independence. For this message carries within it the way to live there. Truly, the way to live is the way of connection, of direct communication to your guide and to me. For you have within you a direct transmittal line to the transcendent. You have within you a direct and unbroken line to your guide, who is there for the express purpose of bringing you into your Wholeness, your Completeness, there.

As you have opened up to receive this friend, and to hear the way for you to live, and as you have allowed for it to come forth, you have moved lovingly into your most appropriate, your true path in life. Now the journey you are on is a journey without distance, for it is a journey which is in all ways, a journey of letting go into the light, the love of your Source. As you allow for the dissipation of the illusionary way, the way of separation, you will begin your inward journey to who and what you really are.

Now these words may seem to you to be vaporous, or to be that which is difficult to grasp, to follow, and to understand. They may seem as words that are nebulous in their meaning and that which requires a great deal of effort, and that which has the capacity to delude you. Well, it is truly as you persist in the listening and in the following that you can come into the way there. Now as you bring to bear on your life, the curiosity and the persistence to stay with the joining, and to come here every day at every decision point or at every point of loneliness or joy, I am with you and will make myself known to you.

It will be for you, a feeling of peace and a knowing, that you have tapped into the truth of you. Now this feeling, this knowing, does not have to be an isolated and rare moment, nor does it have to be that which comes only at crisis points, for it can be there always as you turn here and get the feel of it, the grounding and familiar feel of living from this way. It is as you experience it again and again that the truth comes forth and guides you miraculously through the times you live in.

Your needs will be met and your life will feel full, in its living of this way of life. Such a joy to embrace your others there as children of the Source, fellow travellers, and intrinsically interwoven with the Whole. I can tell you, as one who has travelled the earth plane, that you are walking with a multitude who exist there with you on the spiritual plane, many who see you and embrace you and want you to come into the truth of your being.

We here, take every opportunity to show you the way there. Now do not be afraid as you hear this, for the spiritual beings who exist with you have only your best interest at heart. They have only your well being at heart and they are mightily interested in you. They are not sitting there making judgements about you, nor are they disengaging with you because of what you think may be bad or unforgivable behavior. They see the mire you are in and the madness that has trapped mankind into the miasma of insanity. They see this and they ache to help you. As they move about on the fourth dimension they have your well being at heart.

Now as you hear this, open up! Invite in! For you are met with a love that will sustain you there as you release your ignorance and your sense of deep isolation. Never alone, dear one, never alone.

Chapter 40

The writings from the Foundation for Transformation are available to you, for the one who is bringing to the third dimension these transmitted works, has agreed to write and publish what she has heard. She has agreed and she is committed to doing this. Now as you feel the movement within you, and as you see the truth of what has come forth, do not hesitate to tell others about what you have so wonderfully experienced, for it is as you tell others and as they hear of the words from you and as you express your amazement at what you have discovered, that others will have the curiosity and the courage to also turn inward and listen.

Now the biggest fear that will be expressed will be the fear that it is not safe to do this. That there are hidden powers out there that will invade one's consciousness and one's mind set. This will be the fear that will hold some back from the wonderful discovery of the truth of them. Now in all ways there is no reason to fear. There is no reason to holdback and not investigate. Let it be known to your guide that you wish to experience only that which is from the love of God and only that which will bring about the connection to your truth. As you do so request this, this will be heard.

Now I would urge you to not dally there, nor put things off until another time. Things seem to be going moderately well for you, and you seem to have some rejoicing. And yet, until you are in touch with guidance, do not settle for a partial sense of happiness or a momentary feeling of joy. No, do not settle for a crumb when a banquet is there to be had. We would encourage you to taste each morsel of truth and feast on the meal prepared for you within the heart and soul of you.

So delightful will your experience be and so fulfilling in so many ways that you will not want to find another way to live ever. You will have found the fountain of youth, the wellspring of joy and the head springs of living waters there for you. I would encourage you to embrace this, dear one, as one would embrace the fresh pure air after a dust storm, or the cool breezes after a heat wave of insufferably stifling and torrid, stagnant layer of humidity. Now the call is to open up to this cool refreshing breeze and allow the separation of the false and deadening illusion to fall away. Let the true wellspring come forth, washing you in the invigorating, life-giving waters of living love. What a bath that will be, and what a rejuvenation for your spirit to feel into. Refreshed, renewed and reinvigorated will you be. With the spirit of hopefulness, joy, and forward movement felt as the very truth of you. Now is the time to allow for this, dear one. Now is the time to turn your life away from the cultural miasma so mercilessly pummeled into you. Let the true value of life come forth as you do so find the truth there. Now I would tell you that you are not alone as you do so open up.

Again and again I tell you, that as you join here and as you allow for our friendship to be felt that you can know what I have been telling you here. Together, we will climb the mountain of opportunity and peace, and tread gently there as we view the horizons ahead, which are now easily approached and taken in stride. All will be accomplished as you find yourself given a mission, a love light to beacon you, and a road map of certainty to your fulfillment. I am with you. Let us tread together, and let us find the way, hand in hand, walking with the joy of true companions, true friends there.

We are indeed One with the Wholeness and we are meant to embrace togetherness always. Let me tell you, that I will not forsake you, ever. I will not abandon you, ever. Nor will I judge you as unworthy. No, we are of the same stuff, you and me. We are of the same Source and we have all the sameness of that Source available to us. You are truly my sister, my brother, and you are truly interwoven in the most profound way. I love you and will never let you go. We are indeed, One.

Chapter 41

Intentionality. Let us talk about intentionality. Here is a key ingredient in your unfolding. I can tell you that when I existed there on the earth plane, I lived my life from an intention to bring to the people what I had come to know so fully there. What is it about intentionality that is so important?

Well, first of all, intention is that which places your desires in a forward movement. It is that which places your desires into movement there, for it lets the desire be brought to the forefront of consciousness and the clearing away of extraneous and superficial needs and wants. Now it is in listening to your inner guidance that you will find the mission for you and it is in bringing to bear on that mission your intention, that the forward movement will happen, will transpire there. For we here, can then accept as your free will what you have expressed. Your intention to listen and follow that which you have heard as meaningful to you, will bring about increased intentionality, for you will then have the conviction which now is brought to you by experiences, again and again.

The conviction and the intention then are necessary ingredients in your forward movement unto the Father. This important understanding must be felt as the truth of you. You cannot proceed without a conviction and an intentionality. Nor can you proceed without the inner guidance heard within, and be on the correct, the transcendent mission for you. Now in all ways, you can count on the movement as you do so allow, dear one.

But you must embrace as you do so experience, with an intent that is similar to the intention you would have as you would embrace one deeply loved. No holding back there, if you want to show that one how much you love him/her. No holding back to increase your involvement with that one, and so it is with your guides, so it is. We are involved with you, we are involved there. Let your trust and your curiosity and your desire be felt.

Now the time will be made available to you to do this, for it is not in a long and lengthy period of togetherness in deepest meditation, nor is it in isolating your world that our connection can be heard. It is in the simple asking for our involvement, that the knowing experience will be had. And so, ask with persistence and quiet yourself enough to listen, there.

Each step along the way is a step in the right direction and each step along the way will unfold for you, the next step there. Do not feel that you are treading on thin ice as you abide with spirit. Do not think that because only a few are open with their involvement that it is not the truth. For in the spiritual involvement is the truth there always. I am with you and I will not abandon you ever.

Interwoven with the loving embrace of a parent, or a sibling, I am with you, so take these words into your heart and into your consciousness and let them dwell there, for we have heard you and we will answer. Be intent on opening up to hear and do not dismay if in listening you do not at first hear, for it takes practice. A few trips along the way are not enough to deter you, for that is like any thing else. It takes practice, practice and more practice. As you clear out the thinking mind set of your enculturation and as you open up to the divine transmission, you will delight in this and find such a relief and such a right knowing of this way to live and have your being, for you will know of your connection to the larger Wholeness of which you are intricately interwoven. Never alone there, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 42

Now we are sharing absolutely wonderful news with you. Such news that you are now hearing is so transforming that it is no doubt the most important news you can hear. For it is news that will set you on the transformative path there. The path of transformation is the path that will bring you into new and unexplored regions of consciousness and will open to you the greater Wholeness of who and what you are. For there are indeed, dimensions of life that are unexplored within the heart and mind of you.

Now how could it be that within the heart and mind there are dimensions of reality unexplored? Well, that is what this chapter is about and that is what we will now focus on. I can tell you as one who has explored these dimensions, that they are real and that they are available to all. What a wonderful time to be had as you find that your reality is much broader and much more inclusive than what you had previously been taught. For your reality includes the multidimensional realms that exist there for you, to find and explore.

You see, each one is a multidimensional being, and each one is living on these various dimensions even now. But the third dimension, the dimension of the material plane, is felt as the only plane of existence that is real. But indeed, this is only a very small part of you. You are living within a great and vast dimensional reality that includes so much more, dear one. So much more and so vast is this dimensionality of you, that you cannot imagine it.

You see, you are indeed, held in the mind of your Source and have all that the Source has there for you to experience. I often left the three dimensional plane when I sojourned there with you. I often dwelt with the spiritual brothers and sisters who were existing on the other realms. For it was as I lingered there and gained the knowledge of what was transpiring on the Earth at the time I was living in, that I was able to move forward, giving the gift of love and involvement from our Father to all.

I listened and I followed and I gained the knowing of my next steps. And so it is not in abandoning your life on the earth plane, nor is it in withdrawing your involvement, but it is in opening up to hear what your next steps there are that you can move most comfortably, most perfectly forward there. Life is a movement into the ever expanding and unfolding newness, freshness, and life is always this. And so even when you depart from your earthly body you will be involved in further expanding and unfolding. You will find that your life is meant to be a place of love given out to others and flowing freely forth, bathing you in the energy of freshness, newness and delight.

So hopeful will this life be and so full of promises being fulfilled and new ones made that you will never want for what to do with your life. Always, will you have a delightful way to move forward there. Now the time to allow for this is now, dear one, truly the time is now. I invite you to ask of your guide and of me to give you experiences of your multidimensional being and to taste the fullness of you. Now is the time to delight and explore. We are One always. Never alone there, never alone.

Chapter 43

Let us discuss the subject of punishment. Now punishment is often thought to be the outcome of bad behavior. Punishment on your level of life is often thought to be just rewards for that which is unacceptable behavior or criminal behavior there. And in the area of noncriminality also, the idea of just reward is held as that which is appropriate. How does this idea line up with the will of the Source there, the mind of the Creator?

Well, in all ways, this is not the idea the Father had for you. For those who have abandoned their integrity and have allowed for the mind set of ego to reign, have not been set aside to experience severe and harsh punishment. Now in all ways these ones are loved, also. These ones are abided with also, and these ones have every opportunity to turn inward and ask for help, also. We are not punitive there. We are not waiting for an opportunity to discipline and demonstrate retribution. For that idea is in direct opposition to what the Source would have all know.

Now the behavior of those who are living from separation is often behavior based on ignorance, based on learned behavior from parents or others in control and are behaviors viewed on the media as that which merits acclaim. For your media holds criminals as worthy of great coverage and great attention paid to. And so young ones who want such attention often think that the criminal way, the deviant way, as the way to acquire that attention.

Now the ignorance of a people who would relegate criminals to the highest attention and fame is a people who has let the mind set of separation be at the forefront there. This is so dangerous for you, for it is as the media and the those in power focus on these deviant ways that these ways will increase. We here, are working to promote peace and love, joy and connection to spirit, to the transcendent way there. Why? Because this is the truth of you! This is the truth of existence. You are meant to be a joyful people, a happy species, and a species moving and having your being in the supreme One, the divine One, the Source there, always. I can tell you that you will relinquish your desire to see retribution of those who misbehave, and focus your energy on sharing the good news of eternal love as you do so come into connection and experience this for yourself.

No harm can come of this and no guilt will be felt there. As you allow for our connection to be had, let your feelings of punishment towards other and your feelings of punishment towards yourself, which you do at times feel, be released. For you are loved and held in the mind of your Source as a perfect being, a beloved child, and as His/Her own. And so the forward movement of love continues even now. Joy in his beloved one and joy in the releasing of the harshness that will never bring out the change so desired. The harshness is always a call for more love.

We must let the truth of who and what we are come forth as loving and nurturing beings, teaching others to love and experience what we have come to know. Now is the time to do this and now is the time to release all. I love you and will not let you go alone. I will be there, never to abandon you ever. We are as One, you and I. We are as One. Now turn here and come to me. Turn here and abide with me. Listen as I give you the knowing that we are in connection and we are in an embrace of profound significance. Release it all and claim your redemption. I love you and that is all that needs to be said.

Chapter 44

Have you ever wondered why it is that so many people have not found their inner guidance? Have you ever wondered why the spiritual dimension, which you have found to be real, is disregarded by so many there? Well, I can tell you that this situation of disregard is changing. Even as you read this, it is changing. Many now have discovered that within the very heart and soul of them is a presence, a knowing, a Voice for Truth there, that will lead them through the situations they find themselves in.

Now as you have wondered about your inner guidance as that which is real or that which is imaginary, that which is an illusion there, let me assure you that it is not illusionary and not that which is capable of deceiving you. But let me assure you that the old mind sets are in place there, and will pop up often, to disengage you from your connection, as you do so allow. The old mind sets and the way of separation will bring you into the malaise there, a temporary set back, often.

As you come to realize the way of the ego, the defenses that are habituated there, you will get savvy of their potential to delude and you will openly disavow them as not real, that which are substanceless and that which have no power. No, always are you in charge there. Always are you the one who can choose your correct mind set. I would encourage you to have the mind set of connection. Ask often, for me to join you. Ask often, for the spirit of truth to come forth there for you. It is in the repeated asking and listening and following that the verification will be there for you. It is in the continual and habituated, but freely chosen mind set of connection, of joining, that you will move forward with the freedom to be who and what you really are. The safety and the security, the solid foundation of living from this way, is the groundedness you need to traverse the life you are living.

I can assure you that the ways of history, the ways of the enculturated mind set, are not the mind set, the way your Source would have you live. I set all things in order as you move from the love that is who and what you are. All things in perfect order and unlimited potential are there. Now the movement you are in, though it seems as though monumental for you, is a movement into what is easily doable and will be done step by step and with a surefootedness, as you hold my hand and as we walk together. Listen and follow and do not weary, dear one. Now your movement into your mission is of the utmost importance for the Whole, for you cannot know the significance to your others that your movement holds.

Each one that is willing and intent on fulfilling his/her mission and moves lovingly forward there is transforming the third dimension and allowing for a change of magnificence, a truth of life to come forth. Now the diseases and the sickness, the cruelty and the hate, the ugliness and the deceit, the brutality and the disfigurement will all be released. And the kingdom of your Father, the Kingdom of God, will be seen there, for you are living in the Kingdom. You are not separate from it and it will emerge there for you, as you embrace so heartily, this news. Many will be then able to come forth and embrace the truth and the forward movement will be felt mightily in your lives. The multidimensional nature of you will come forth and you will see at last, the bright morning star, the glowing embers of love, and the shining and delightful music of the spheres will be heard. Never alone there dear one, truly, never alone.

Chapter 45

Stay focused. Stay focused on your unfolding of integrity. Now these words are meant to bring you back to what is of the greatest importance for you. As you stay focused on your connection to your spiritual being, your truth there, you will bring into your life, a joy of profound significance. This joy will be felt at the deepest level of your being, and will surmount any difficulties you are experiencing, for it will be the groundedness of your being there. You have felt joy before and you do know the feeling of fullness, of completeness you feel, as you allow for the joy to be felt. Invigorated and life affirming is this joy. Now it is important for you to stay focused, because you can easily be brought into the flow of a habituated life of conditioned and mindless existence. Eons, you have lived this way and eons of time have pummeled into your mind, the way of ego there.

Now is the letting go time and the releasing time. Now is the time to stop and refocus your life. Ask first, Father what would you have me do this moment, this day? In this situation, what would the will of the Source, my Creator, have me do? And let the alignment with the Holy Spirit, my real self be felt, Father. Join with me this day and allow for the love that I am to come forth, here. I am not alone here ever and I am truly not that which is separate from the greater Wholeness of me. Let me in dear one, truly let me in.

Now as you have heard this and you are willing to turn inward again, I would urge you to quiet your conditioned thinking mind set. Let thoughts all dissipate. Let your focus return to the quiet place of stillness, the inner sanctuary there, and ask for your truth to be made known to you. Ask for your guide, for me, for your spiritual others to help you there. And together, we will work with you to discern your next step. Now we take our responsibility seriously and we are not whimsical in our answers to you. We are serious in giving you the perfect next step to take. We may tell you to relax more, to lighten up, to find a fun thing to do that day. But in all ways, our suggestion to you will be that which will feel freeing and not dogmatically given. It will feel like that which ushers in the freedom, the freshness, and the Wholeness, that will move you forward.

Now in all ways, we do not want to limit your behaviors to only that which is teaching or sharing the good news, for it is as you experience the fullness of your life in all its richness, and in all the activities, that you will release into the truth of you. You are free to enjoy all of life there and it is our hope to have you feel enriched and enlivened there. You need change and variation, you need friendships and fun and you need delight as you live. All is a part of the love of the Father. And so, do not think your involvement is only that which will be narrow in its experience, nor that which will drag down into a one way to live, or act, or be, scenario. No, freely are you living there. But it is as you live from love and from joining that the choices made will be most appropriate. Let these words be taken and abided with there and savor them, for they are the truth. I am with you in the frivolity of life and in the freshness of experience lived each day. Never alone there, ever. We are indeed, One.

Chapter 46

You are companioned with mightily there. As you continue on with your mind set of exploration and discovery and as you gain the input from the divine aspect of your being, the true self, never forget you are joined there with many who are working with you. Now we, who exist here in the spiritual dimension, are working with you with an earnestness that is palpable here. We are intent on you uncovering your true self and living a life of truth. Of all the things you could ever discover in your life, what you're reading here is the most important.

Now I have said this to you before and I have said it again and again, but the need to address this issue is paramount for us here. You can only gain entrance into the truth of you by joining. You can only come into alignment by asking for your connection to the Infinitude of whom you are to be felt. For the movement of the Father is not separate, and so it is as you embrace and open up to receive, that the movement will be felt there.

Now is the time to come forth, dear one. Now is the time to bring all into the fullness of who and what you are. I implore you to take this writing seriously and do not dismiss it as that which is optional. For it will only delay your true unfolding as you do so ignore. Sooner or later you will open up to understand and embrace and begin the journey to your Wholeness, and so the call is to not delay! Do not delay what will inevitably be the movement for you. For you will only postpone the coming forth of the reality of you.

The truth will come forth just as the sun shines daily and the tides move unalterably forward. The truth of you must come forth. As you do delay, you will experience the consequences of living from separation. These are consequences which hold in them what you now believe, that you are fallible, that you are prone to sickness and disease, and that you will die a death of certitude, to end life there.

But in all ways this is faulty. You are an eternal being and can live from that eternality. Now you can live with the knowledge of your eternal existence and your freedom from death and disease. You can escape those outcomes of limitation and embrace your beauty, health, intelligence, know-how and divine movement. In all ways, you have that as your birthright, dear one. You have that as your birthright. Now in the joining of life and in the living from that joined perspective will the truth of this come forth. For you will find that the problems that plagued the limited mind set are not necessary to embrace, and you will find yourself refuting them, and this will allow for the very truth of you to be expressed, that you are eternal, whole and free and you are a direct inheritor of all that the Source has. You are an expression of that Source, held in the mind of that Source, and not separate from it. Therefore, you are an inheritor of all that the Source is, limitless, eternal, full, whole, complete, lovingly healthy, and incapable of illness or suffering. All is well there, dear one. Open up to feel into and know the truth, there. You are One, dear One, truly you are One.

Chapter 47

Initiate your plan wisely as you live. Initiate your plans with the guidance from the transcendent. Initiate only after you have heard, for this is the way to proceed there. You are ready to move forward there, and you are ready to embrace fully, your mission. How should you do this? How should you proceed there? For the how of it and the wherefore of it seem paramount to you. Such tasks of immensity to undertake and such a huge job to inform the world of its connection there. So much false information to set straight and such a mountain of cultural miasma to contradict.

We here, understand what you feel faced with, for we have felt that way at times, too. How can we share with people there, the good news, as it seems so improbable that anyone will hear? And yet there is no doubt that the words, the true meaning of life, must come forth eventually. Now the concerted effort and the concerted intention of vast numbers are making the news available to millions. On the spiritual plane and on the earthly plane many have chosen to share the good news of direct connection. And so the mask of illusion is being shed.

The corporate giants who seek to manipulate and delude, are losing their hold and the light of living love is shining through. People, you are much more! People, you are indeed much more, as you seek to understand the very truth of you! For indeed, you are direct inheritors of the Source there. You are direct and immediate inheritors of the Creator, Sustainer. You are not separate from that One, the Wholeness of you, the Infinitude of you. You are not separate, neither are you alone as you sojourn there.

Now as you turn inward and as you seek guidance as to how to give your gift, remember that it is not with others that the call is made alone, for it is in your unique gift that the mission is accomplished. No one can give your gift, but you. No one can offer what you have chosen as your gift, but you.

And so your gift is of immense importance to give. And so I say initiate your plans with the wisdom gained from your connection to guidance. We are here and we do hear you and we will show you the way there. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

Now let your mind set of separation be released and quiet your thinking. Let the hustle and bustle, the little nagging things, the minor anxiety be released and quiet yourself. Ask for your transmittal line to be cleared and ask for your guidance to make him/herself known to you. Ask that I join you there and together we will uncover the perfect plan for you to follow. Now this plan is one that is in all ways flexible and fluid, for it must be, to weather the storms of the ego that will continue to insinuate into your life. But the goals are firm, the destination is firm, and the gifting is inalienable for you and for others.

Let your careful initiation of plans be willingly undertaken and do not fear, we will stay with you through the false starts and the missteps that will inevitably happen. Stay involved here and do not allow for your intention to dissipate. No, increase it by involving yourself in the planning and the work. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 48

Now we will explore that part of you which is your limited mind set, for it is necessary to understand this as you undertake to disregard and eventually annihilate it. Your mind set of limitation is that which is, in all ways, fallacious, a made-up thing based on what you have been taught and had instilled in you by your culture. Eons of time have been involved in this fallacious mind set, which is intent on undermining your peace, your happiness, there.

Now in all ways, this mind set is based on fear. It is based on protection and on security there. Intent on insinuating itself into your every day life and looking for an opportunity to poke a hole in any idea of peace, it continues on, for this system is intent on maintaining itself as real. Any disregard for what it is saying would annihilate it. But dismissal is what is called for as it rears its ugly head.

Now remember, this ego, this mind set of fear is not an entity there, but only a set of habits, strategies, defenses put in place by your ego to protect what has seemed as fallibility and fragility and frailty. It is a puffed-up thing, a thing of greed, competition and a wily and cunning set of ideas, falsely laid down over time to upset peace and happiness, and put in place to undermine connection to inner guidance.

Now remember, you are dealing with habitual thinking, not an entity of evil, just faulty thinking, well entrenched in your mind, well-grooved and well-practiced in this life time and in numerous others, countless others. But, as you understand what you are dealing with, it is an easy thing to let go of. Now the key here is to call on your guidance to help you, claim your peace and your birth right and disregard the incantation of ego. Let it go. Refute it as meaningless and ignore its habitual claim to you. As you disregard it, shake it up, move away and forcefully disclaim it, claim your peace and your connection, the habit of the defenses will dissipate, for not engaged is not enhanced. Let it go, and turn your thoughts away to another idea, a different thing to focus on. Turn your thoughts to the love that you are and the guidance that you have available to help you there.

I certainly would encourage you to undertake this, and in a short time with practice, the mind set of separation will dissipate. Now the call is to do this as often as the ego rears its head. Whenever jealousy, hate, undermining, self doubt, punishment, all the negative things emerge, ask for guidance. Disengage that part of yourself and ask for next steps there. Ask for your peace. Your peace is the ground swell of Wholeness, the foundation of moving forward, of hearing there. So cultivate your peaceful attitude, your quiet mind and your satisfied mind, your joyful mind.

Here is the way to bring sanity back into your life. Not through substances, nor through hours of therapy with the leading psychiatrist, nor with reading countless numbers of self-help books can your sanity be had. No! It is in listening to inner guidance and cultivation of that deep relationship with spirit, your right mind there. Always, this right mind is there to assist you, to give you what you need to live from this place, always.

I am there for you, for I will not abandon you there ever. I will not leave you there. Some of you have known abandonment first hand, have felt alone and isolated there. You have felt as one who lives anonymously and as non-meaningful to life. But I refute that! I refute your sense of unimportance! You are important here. You are that part which completes the Whole and in which all feel a loss when you are living from separation. We urge you to abide with us, dear one. Come here and come home. Never alone there. And do not think this is an invitation to end your life; no, it is an invitation to become fully alive, to participate in the world you are in and to feel into the truth of this. I love you and that is the truth of things. Never alone there, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 49

Let us discuss the topic of beauty, for though it is often difficult for you there to truly understand what beauty is, we will give you an indication here. Beauty is that which brings to you a feeling of that which is harmonious and filled with qualities of perfection. Beauty is often associated with a desire to own that thing or become like that one whom we see as beautiful. Beauty is idolized in your culture and often is held up as an impossibility to obtain, but worthy of striving for, and so your species goes to extreme measures to achieve this.

Now how does your idea of beauty compare with what the Source would have you know of beauty. Certainly the idea of harmony is present in both yours and the Father's meaning. But beauty as the Father sees it is that which is not measured in the color and bounce of hair nor the perfectly shaped fingernail. Neither is beauty that which is unavailable to some and not for others. For all have a beautiful nature as created. Now as you align yourself with the Father, you will see greater perfection and symmetry, harmony and health begin to come forth. For the results of your joining will increase the beauty which is inherent in you. So you ask for the extra weight to be let go of, for the releasing of habits that have been ingrained in you, and for the next steps to take to allow for your beauty to come forth. Physical beauty will come forth as you embrace the beautiful nature of you, which means the lovely nature of you, the loving nature of you. This love of which you are made is a spiritual energy which has as its purpose to set all things right, to replace disorder with order, disfigurement with correct proportions and correct and make healthful all aspects of body.

Now beauty in the mind of the Source is yours as you live in harmony with your others there. You are a presence of beauty as you do so live from this way. Now relax dear one, and let the regimens of beauty and the striving to achieve perfection through artificial means be eased and allowed to dissipate. You are a beauty in my eyes and in the eyes of those seeing you there from the spiritual plane. Let your idea expand to include the truth of you. Now we will let this chapter on beauty be closed, for it is only in allowing for guidance and for your joining that the true knowledge can be let in, dear one. Let in and allow, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 50

It is time to allow for your greater Wholeness to come forth. Now is the time to allow for this and to embrace what you truly are. It is difficult for you to believe that you are the place where your Source expresses. You are the direct place of the expression of God, as you! You are the place and you are the movement of the Father coming into the third dimension. Now you are not separate from that Allness, neither are you meant to live a life of separateness. Why is it that this message is given time and time again? Because it is so important for you to embrace there.

Now your life is truly meant to be a place where the movement is given and brought forth there. And so it is in learning of the reality of you and claiming it as your own that the delightful unfolding, the gifting, can be given. You are not a random creation, nor are you a happenstance being that was born with a random and chance-like life. No, you were a design in the mind of the Father, created and sustained there by that same love. It is of the utmost importance for you to get this, my dear one.

It is of the utmost importance, for as you allow the dawning of this to be truly felt in your mind, you will then have an estimation of yourself that is in truth, who and what you really are. I can tell you that we here are working so intensely, so lovingly with you to bring you into this awareness, for it is as you get this and live from this knowing that the changes on the Earth will occur. As you embrace this and gain the fortitude, the multitudes who are working with you will transform the world with your life. Transformation is the ongoing nature of life and the ever changing anew aspect of life.

Now we here have for you, a gifting of fulfillment, and it is as you usher forth with your gifts that the gifting to you will be felt. Now we delight in gifting you. It is the nature of Source to gift you and it is the nature of life to bestow blessings. We know what will bless you there and we know what will bring forth for you, true and deep fulfillment felt as truly real. Not necessarily in material gifts, nor in fame, nor fortune, nor in the culturally determined wants and desires, but in the knowing of who and what you are, and moving to that love, will the bounty be had by you. To feel this completeness, this fullness, this real you, is the gift. Mightily is our desire to gift you with this.

Now many have begun to allow for this to be felt and many have opened up to receive. As you give out and as you gift your life to others, you will receive. I love you there and I am waiting for you. Open arms and an open heart I have for you. I invite you to enter in here. I love you and that is the truth there. I love you.

Chapter 51

Let us begin this chapter with some facts about the fundamental nature of you. Let us begin by examining what could be called principalities or laws, first causes. Now you have as the core of your being, a body of light which is indwelt by your soul. Soul is your capacity to feel into the substance, the nature of things, as they are presented to you. Your soul is a guidepost, a wayshower for action.

Now you are indwelt by spirit and you are that same spiritual body living on many dimensions there. You do not realize this at this time. As you have chosen to now experience the third dimension, the material plane, you have had that body of materialism to be experienced. But, in all ways, your eternal body, your body of light, exists on other planes as well. And yet it is the truth there. You do exist on multiple planes of existence in which you are a participant. But your conscious awareness remains with the material plane at this time.

The principality of eternity is indeed valid. You are an eternal one and have lived from the beginning of creation. Your Source held you and holds you in universal mind currently, and you have not been let go of as you have sojourned on the third dimension. Now the principality of eternalness is important for you to understand for it can release your fear of the end point of existence which does not happen. Always, you will continue on with life.

Another principality is the principality of ever unfolding anew. You are that which unfolds anew. As the old dies, the new is born again and again and again. And so you are ever increasing in your life and knowing of your reality, of the created universe. Ever unfolding anew! What a wonderful thing this is to ponder and how refreshing to know that as you let go of the limitations of the separated way you are born again anew into an understanding that is increased in breath and depth and scope. And so the principalities of eternalness and ever experiencing anew are delightful to incorporate into your mind set now. How invigorating this is and how important in releasing the constraints and the boredom and the depression so often experienced on your plane. Now I would encourage each one to ask of his/her guide to show you how you can let go of the old in your life and embrace the new, for you can undertake this in a much more conscious way. As the Phoenix rises from the ashes bright and new, so you can be born again into the love and the innocence and the freedom which are inherently yours. As this chapter on the first causes of life, the principalities of life is given, rejoice in this and undertake to find what you need to know to move lovingly forward there. Given in peace to you, I am with you there.

Chapter 52

Abide with me this day. We are meant to abide together there and we are meant to live co-joined, in relationship, always. I send this message to you, for it is as you truly embrace it, that you will feel into the bounty of blessings there for you. Such a delight to feel the movement into your Wholeness there and such a delight to know that you are not treading on thin ice, but always sure-footed, as you move along life's path. Hand in hand we can tread the highways and byways together. I will hold you up as you stumble and I will support you as you move errantly away and then turn back.

We will follow the map of love, the guideposts of infinity. Do not feel the need to humble yourself, nor feel unworthy there. No, we are brother or sister, you and I; we are of the same stuff. Now it is true that I am awakened and I have the perspective from the transcendent, but you have that potentiality, too! You have the same inherent birthright of wholeness, completeness, that I have. Now together, we can praise our Father/Mother God, our Source. It is together, we can glorify this family we are in.

Let us not despise our others there, but let us love them as we love each other. Openly and genuinely and knowing that they are indeed inheritors, too. They are of the same stuff as us. And so the call is to not shun others as somehow different than us, but to embrace fully, all there. As you go about your life this day, think in terms of who you are with always. You are with me and the multitudes on the invisible plane who are there for you as a part of whom and what you are. Your guide is there and others who are specifically working with you to guide you as you live.

Now the joy of our life together is there to experience as I so do. For it is a joyful walk we can have there! It is a joyful and fruitful walk with ongoing togetherness, to be experienced always. This is the way it is, dear one. You are eternal and you are ever unfolding anew. And so I again invite you to hold my hand today. I am here and I do love you. That is the truth of it. We are, indeed, One.

Now let us turn our attention and open our minds to new information that is given to you this day. You are in the midst of a movement of gargantuan proportions there. This movement, which is the movement of the Source, is that which is filled with myriad lives and multitudes of experiencers. I can tell you that the life you are living is not that which is separate. Each one has a destiny to fulfill, a mission to keep, and a promise to follow. Each one has a guide to accompany that one and each one has available my involvement with you. Many are working with you to guide you there and to give to you the way to live there.

Now you must see yourself as that which is abided with and that which is not separate. As you let in the knowing of this and as you embrace this, you will feel into the multitudes there who are working with you. Your life is indwelt by spirit and it is that which has the transcendent nature of life available to it. Now these words are meaningful to you as you abide with them and as you embrace them. For they are words which will open to you the vast and panoramic nature of existence which is so magnificent in its beauty and so far-reaching in its scope. As you embrace the idea of importance to your others there, you will take on a life that is felt as significant there, beyond what you now know. You will take on a life filled with the strength to give all that you can give as the gift is so important and so meaningful to the Wholeness there.

This idea of the magnificent movement of the Father, the gargantuan and immeasurably immense movement that impacts on the farthest reaches of creation, and your part in it, are the words for you to hear in this chapter. Now open up to receive the news and hold it close to you, for you will soon understand what is meant here. As you embrace this, you will find the words will bring you into the flow, which embraces the importance and the significance of it. In all ways your life is meaningful and it is a life of immensity. Even in the small ways is your life important. Even in the every day things as they are done with love is your life important there. The small ways and the large ways are all felt on the invisible plane and impacted there. And so, we gift you as you gift us, knowingly loving you and abiding with you. Soon the dark days of separation will be over and the heralding of a new day will be had, a new day and a new beginning embraced and cherished by all. We are one movement, dear one, truly we are One.

Chapter 54

There is meaning in your life. We have talked in this book about the meaning that is you, the divine meaning the Source has, as you. Now you are the meaning and you are the love made manifest in your world. You are the place, the very place, where the love of your Source comes through mightily there. I would encourage each one to take these words into your heart and live with them, abide with them. You are the place where love can come into the world, and where the Source can manifest there as you.

What delightful words these are, for they put you into the context of the truth of you. They put you into the very truth of life there. For as you live there, you are the place of love in the world. Acting from that love and manifesting as that love, that divine energy of love there, is who and what you are. And so as you bring to bear on the circumstances of your life this truth, you will then act on it and live from it. I would invite each of you to ask in the way of a child to a parent, what is my way here? What is the truth of me here and how can I know these words?

And as you do so invite for the way to be made known to you, you will so feel into them and live from them. The way will be made plain to you and the next steps of love will come forth. You are not alone there, dear one, truly you are not alone there. I love you and that is the best news you could ever hear. I love you. Let your life come forth beautifully and bountifully as you embrace what you now know. We are indeed One, lovingly and completely, One.

Chapter 55

There is a movement underway which will usher in a new beginning. Now you are a part of this movement as you have opened up to read this book. You are a part of this new beginning, for you have allowed the mind set of curiosity and the spirit of discovery to be allowed in. As you have let go of the habituated ways to think and live, you have allowed for the new to be brought forth. You are opening up to receive dear one, and the time to embrace your Wholeness, your spiritual identity is now.

You are not alone there as you live, neither are you living a life of random acts nor calculated unfolding, for your life is always that which is moving from the Source there. Now it is as you open up to receive that this movement of divinity will be felt, for as you have closed off this, you have lived from what could be called consequences or results based on a mind set of limitation, of separation. And so you have felt defended, fearful and insecure there. For you have based your existence on the momentary, the happenstance, and the probability of occurrences.

But you are now opening to the miracle-mindedness that is your nature. For your nature is that which is moving from the transcendent perspective which holds the big picture in its view. The picture of your movement, which involves the multitudes and those others who will be impacted, are indeed, that which are held in our view.

We see you as you live there and we are working mightily to give you a glimpse, no, a full view of who and what you are. And so as the opportunity arises, we take it to impact you. We want you to be fulfilled as your Source would have you be fulfilled. We want you to sense your connection and your involvement with us. We want you to come to know your mission and your message of living love to be gifting your others. As you ask what this is for, we hear you and we will show you the way.

Now this will not take hours of meditation, nor will it take some behaviors of monk-like dedication, nor will it take deprivation there. But it will take intention and it will take commitment to listen and follow. Because you have lived from the separated way for so long, you have patterns of behaviors that are entrenched and must be refuted to be released. As you do so gain an experience and more experiences, you will then move more openly toward your mission there. Now the time to do this is now. Let your attention be turned inward and let the enculturated way be let go of there. For now is the time to find anew what was lost but now can be found there. We are One, now and forever.

Chapter 56

As we begin this writing, let us not question its validity, nor question its meaning for us. Rather, let us ask for the validity to be made known to us and the meaning to come forth. For you must willingly ask for the experience of your connection, your divine inheritance, to be made known to you. Are you wondering why you are now so open to receive this where as a while ago these words would have seemed as that which are inconsequential and that which hold no meaning? Why is it that now, like at no other time, man/woman kind is opening up to find anew what has always been there but has been forgotten, has been let go of as unimportant. Well, I will tell you that now there is a growing awareness as many have opened up to see life for what it is, a magnificent movement of unparalleled beauty and meaning, and a joyful and exuberant experience.

For life is indeed, this meaningful and transcendent reality. Now the call here is to ask for this to be experienced and to allow for it. As you do so allow, you will find that you are led into a life of meaning beyond what you could have ever known. For you will have found that the movement of your being is satisfying like nothing else is. The peace you have as you live from this way will bring you happiness beyond measure.

Now dear one, I would invite you to quiet your thinking mind set and allow for your cares and worries to dissipate. Let your consciousness be felt as like a peaceful and quiet place. Now invite me in to abide with you there and to testify to our connection. Let your experiences of our connection be to you the validating thing, for it is you who will know. Not as you read this, nor as you talk with others there, nor as you hear speeches and sermons, but as you willingly abide here in the place of quiet within, will you know. Now your experience is the validating thing, nothing else. Your own experience! Do not think that you are being deluded, nor led down a garden path by some type of brainwashing, nor mind games. No, dear one. That is not the nature of Source. In all ways, the nature of Source is a sincere and gentle presence gifting you as you live and providing that knowhow and the intelligent movement from your Source. As these words are read, turn quietly inward. I am here for you always. Now is the time.

Chapter 57

There is joy to be had this day. I can assure you that you are truly met there with others who are working with you to give you this wonderful joy of which there is abundance. For joy is meant to be your natural state. You are meant to be a movement of joyous participation as you live there. Now what is there to be joyous about? Well, first of all you are not solitary and you are always that which is connected to your Source. You are of the nature of that Source and you are abundantly gifted there. You are involved in a movement of significance as you do so allow for the mission you agreed upon to come forth.

I can tell you that when I lived there, as I have stated in the early part of this book, my life was joyous and was always felt as that which was meaningful and significant. I joyed in the telling of others, the good news of direct relationship to our Father, and I joyed in giving them news about the freedom they could have as they lived. Now this freedom is meant for you to embrace fully and to experience fully. Your life is meant for you to embrace and joy in.

Now you may ask, how is it that if I am meant to live a life of joy, I do not feel this? I feel at times, ill at ease with life and fearful of the future. Well, dear one, that mind set of unease can be allowed to dissipate as you realize your eternal connection and the truth of who and what you are. For your dis-ease is a symptom of separation, a part of the defense system that was put in place long ago.

Now the way to release this is to realize that you are connected spiritually and that your fundamental nature is spiritual, that it is safe, secure, eternal and unfettered in its perfection and in its movement. You can gain the courage to live as you do so embrace this as the truth of you. Let the experience of your divinity and your Wholeness be felt and then you will move joyously through life.

Now I call on you to turn inward and quiet your thinking mind set. Call on me to abide with you there knowingly, and to release that mind set of separation. You are indeed met with a love there that is bountiful in its blessings for you. And you are that same love meant to give and receive as has been given and received by you. We love you dear one, that is the truth of it. You are not alone.

Chapter 58

As you journey there and as you find your peace in your journey, you can be assured that you are traveling the God-path there. Each one has a destiny to fulfill and each one has a life of significance to live. Not in fame, nor in fortune, but in the movement towards Wholeness is the measure made. And so you all are involved in letting go of the mind set of limitation, of separation, which will increase the Whole there. Of such significance is this to you and to your brothers and sisters, that words cannot convey it.

Now will usher in an awakening of immense proportions, dear one, an awakening that will herald in our place in the universal scheme of things. But we must open up to embrace our heritage and our destiny, our unfolding, as created beings in the universe. We so want you to join us here and for you to understand the part you play, for your Earth is not a planet apart, nor is it a planet uninvolved, but it is that which is a part of the Whole, an intrinsic and invaluable part. Nothing left out in the fullness of God.

The implications of this are immense and are always that which are desirable and perfect for you. No fear here, dear one, no fear of the unknown is called for. Now as you seek to know the truth of you and to experience your direct connection, let your life be felt as abided with. We are directing you, holding you, and supporting you as you do so willingly and of your own choosing come forth as that which is not separate. Let the isolation be released and feel into the truth there. Let this brief message of divine unfolding and its invitation to you be felt mightily and let us joy here this day.

Chapter 59

Never alone as you live there. We are working with you and we are involved with you each and every moment. Now you may say that you do not want company always, for you might be embarrassed to think that someone is with you always. For the thoughts, the habits, and the inconsistencies are not that which you would want anyone to know. Now you are not judged there as we abide with you, nor are you held in condemnation of your behaviors, your thoughts, for we understand your limitations as you have been brought up in a culture and a mind set of separation and have now formed habits and defenses aimed at keeping you safe from your perceptions of a dangerous world.

And so your defenses come into play mightily there as you live. Our task and our commitment to you is to do our best to break through the mind set of separation and bring to you an understanding of the truth of existence there. Not by intellectual means, nor by coercion, nor by tricks and deception do we work. Always, our method is to shine through to you, the love and the safety and the security of your divine birthright. We are there to give you real help and we do this through your allowing, your curiosity, and your openness.

And so the call here is not to embrace what you have not experienced, nor to abide by what you have not felt first hand. Rather, we would encourage you to ask for the experience to be had and express your desire to have the experience, for then you can feel into the truth and you can come from your own knowing. No harsh injunctions, nor fear of retribution, can marshal the truth of you to come into connection. For it is love that you find as you turn inward and abide here with your Wholeness. It is compassion and it is integrity that you find so mightily there. I would say to you this day, ask and it shall be given, seek and you shall find and knock and the door will be opened unto you. That it the truth there my loved one, that is the truth.

Chapter 60

There is great joy to be had this day. Truly, like at no other time, today is a day of joy, for it is a day to find within the relationship, that which will give you what you have been so missing there. For you have lived a life of the greatest delusion as you have lived a life of separateness. You have lived a life of the most empty and unfulfilling as you have searched for what you thought would give you meaning.

Many have thought that money would give them what they could count on to provide security, but the need to manage and protect finances then has occupied one's time. Now many have thought that relationships with family and others would fill the emptiness, and indeed the love given to others is satisfying, but the tenuous nature of relationships there on the earth plane, also brings with it questions of fidelity and commitment. Now as these things have been found as insubstantial, the need to turn to mechanical means of finding peace has been instituted and so substances, of which easily become addicting, and a life style characterized by a fast pace and a hunger for something new is felt. But even the new becomes repetitious and lacks that which is truly fulfilling. The search for an adrenaline rush and living entirely in the moment with everything there to stimulate the senses can only exaggerate the emptiness as the depression with this way and the destruction of this way is felt.

Now as you have engaged in some of these things as is the way there of so many, you have wondered about life and its meaning. You have wondered about the significance of life there for you. This questioning is meant to give you the curiosity to explore more of life and to find what truly is meaningful for you. This emptiness is felt because your means of finding the fullness of you, the truth of you is under siege, under questioning, and has shown itself to be hollow and empty, but the searching mind set, the inquiring mind set is, in all ways, your key to understanding what the truth of you is.

For your spiritual reality, your inner guidance, is searching for every opportunity to point the way there. You will be led as you do so open up to find. In small ways and in large ways, you will be led into the truth of you. For you are not abandoned there ever. You are not left alone to sort it all out and to muddle through. You are given what you need to come forth.

Take the steps as they come, for they are measured for you, in how to let go of what you have believed and for what you have allowed to delude you, small steps in your awakening as you can handle and incorporate into your mind set, your consciousness. Now I am here for you and I have for you a life of love, of gifting, and a life of fulfillment there. Stay close and open up to receive. For you will joy in this! Each step along the way will feel joyous for you and will deepen your commitment to further stay with. And so I say to you there is joy this day. For the old is being released and the new is coming forth mightily there. I love you and that is the truth of it.

I would encourage each and every one who is reading this book, to bring to bear on your questing, your guidance there. Everyone who has chosen to read this book has a movement underway that is significant. Now you have felt the spirit within you and you have found that you are indeed, abided with there. You have listened for your presence there and you have now come to know that indeed, you are not alone there. What wonderful news you have found, and what a joyous movement you have in store for you. I would encourage you to not dismiss this, dear one. Do not dismiss this as inconsequential, nor as that which is a minor thing there, but rather treat it as significant in your life.

For as you abide with our togetherness and as you live out from this relationship, you will bring into your life, a fulfilling and dynamic movement of transformation. You see, your life is meant to open anew, dear one. Your life is meant to unfold anew as the old is let go of and the new is brought forth. Ever unfolding anew and ever bringing to bear on your inner mind set the guidance and the love there for you is the way to live there. Now this means that you will find that much of what occupies you is now seen as that which is superficial. That which has held such a place of importance in your life is now unfulfilling and seems somehow empty. And so you see the cultural miasma for what it is there.

Now you can discern as never before what is right for you, for you will not waste your time in hollow activities with little meaning there. You will let go of relationships that are not fulfilling and you will let go of the addictions of substances and ways of living that are proving so unsatisfying for you. This releasing of these things and this adopting of the truth of you will now usher in as never before, a sense of mission and purpose as you have never felt it before. The accolades of the public or of your loved ones, no longer hold such importance and the dollars that seemed to be as important lose their value.

But instead, you will find that you are brought into the love, safety, security, and substance from your Source. Here lives the dynamic and fulfilling movement of your being. You are meant to be a movement of peace and love, joy and light. You are meant to be this movement and you are meant to bring into the world what the Source would have you bring. Now as you do so abide with me here, I will show you the way there. Together, we will uncover the truth there. Now it is time to quite your thinking mind set. Ask for help in letting go of all that is superficial and empty. Ask for help in clearing out the mind set of the enculturated way and opening up to the fresh air of the transcendent way. You are not alone there, dear one, truly you are not alone. I am with you as you live.

Do not despair as you feel the entrenched ways resurfacing, for it will take persistence and commitment and perseverance to let the habituated way be released. Now you will find that the ego, the defenses you have created, which are eager to not let your experience, your truth appear, will kick in mightily and you will be told from your ego defenses to let this all go, to stay with the tried and true as you have known it, and to dismiss this as irrelevant. But as you do so continue on with the old ways, the same old depression and the same old unfulfillment will return.

Again you will turn here to ask and again you will find the meaning of our togetherness. Now again and again will this pattern come forth, but gradually you will see that the old ways are truly not substantial and you will dismiss them more regularly. Soon you will have found the emptiness there, and you will no longer search there, but you will turn to me, to inner guidance, more and more.

In ways of writing, listening, and speaking will you find your inner guidance. In terms of knowing from small things that transpire in your life and also in bigger events, that you had no idea would be there, will your spiritual being come forth, intent on bringing you into the truth of you. Now dear one, you are much more, truly you are much more. Let your life unfold lovingly there abided with and comforted by and supported by and guided by me. For I love you there and will not disappoint you ever, for we are together through it all, always. Eternally yours and eternally involved am I with you. I love you and that is the truth of it.

Chapter 62

When I sojourned on the earth plane, I was met with many who thought that I had lost my senses there. There were many who thought that I had now gone crazy or at least had turned away from the truth of the established ways. Many thought that I had turned from my heritage and had been a traitor to what was the truth there. I had not turned away from them, but I had come to know that the words of tradition held little that would bring about relationship there. For the words of tradition held people tightly in the way of rituals and dogmas and fear that the way of freedom was surely a way to damnation.

Now I knew that what I had experienced was the truth. I knew it, as I know the reality of the sun or the taste of new wine in my mouth. I knew it and I could not depart from the truth of it. And so I was bound by my integrity and by what I then knew was my mission, to tell others of this glorious freedom we have to live and abide with spirit there. I could not let my love of my family, nor my respect for them, cause me to falsify my life. I knew that the movement of truth that I was sharing was bigger than the situation I was presently in, and that I was giving a gift for all man/woman kind to embrace.

Even then I knew that my mission was important beyond the time and place I was in. Now as those whom I loved jeered me and turned from me, I was indeed distraught. I had loved them mightily there. I had loved them and wanted so for them to see and know what I had come to know so fully. I then turned to my heavenly Father and asked that I be given what I needed to find my peace as I taught others there. And indeed, I was given that peace, for I was told that those that I love would eventually find the truth and come into the direct knowing, whether in this lifetime or in a future one. For what I was teaching was true for all time and for all people. It was the truth of our created selves, that we are in direct connection and that we could live out from that connection.

These words calmed me, and again I proclaimed loudly to all that would hear the good news of direct connection, to hear the will our Father has for us, the direct and divine will of the Father of the created Universe. I turned so often to this resource, the Source, the fountainhead, for nourishment and direction, for safety and security, as the work continued. I didn't know from day to day what would unfold, but I turned mightily to guidance for direction. When the last hours were lived, I had communed almost constantly with the Father and I was given the strength to carry on with the death of my physical body there.

Now I tell you this, for you must not let those that tease you, nor find you mentally off, nor abandon you, to dissuade you from turning to guidance, to not let the cultural way, the traditional way and the way of religious institutions dissuade you, from the direct connection there. For you must honor your relationship and deem it important, just as you and your mission are of the utmost importance to the Wholeness there. Now let us find together, our connection and our relationship of insolubility. We are One, dear one, truly we are One.

In the remaining pages of this book, I will tell you that you are truly ready to embark on a journey there that will bring you into an adventure of your lifetime. For your journey into the relationship of abiding guidance is meant to be an adventure of the highest and most far-reaching kind. Ever unfolding anew, your life will open up to you, vistas that you have never dreamed of. Vistas and mountain peaks that will thrill you there and underlying it all will be the calm peace and reassurance of our relationship of insolubility.

Now your adventure there will include what can be called a hero's journey, a journey of import and significance, that will alter the world you live in. Now as grandiose as these words sound, they are truly of the grandeur of reality there for you. Your mission to the world will impact mightily there and this is not meant to further your ego's need for glorification, nor your bank account's need for money. No, instead, it is meant to tell you the truth of what you are involved in. When you understand the world as that which is a part of a much larger and multidimensional, universal creation and when you realize that you are an integral part of it, you will then feel into the immensity of your work there.

Now always, your mission is meant to bring into the world, the Father's will, the will of your Source. You are the manifestation of that Source here, as you. You are that Source expressing here. And so you must align yourself with the will, the knowing, and the inherent understanding of whom and what you are. It is humbly, that you will feel into this and it is humbly, that you will lay claim to your birthright. But it is in giving this news its true importance, that you can best move lovingly there.

For if you do not hold your mission as that which has direct bearing there, you will dismiss it as inconsequential and not pursue it as that which is of the utmost importance. You must commit to it and you must persist in it. You will come back to it sooner or later anyway, so the call now is to lay claim to releasing your mind set of limitation and come fully forward there, as a committed and unswerving sojourner there, holding hands with me and with your guidance. As we tread the highways and the byways of your Earth, and as we encounter what you have there to deal with, together we will surmount or easily step aside the jogs along the ways. The jilts, the bumps, the strains and stresses, will be easily dealt with as you do so turn here.

Now trust into here, dear one, and experience this to truly believe it. Experience this and as you gain in the experience you will not be thrown off base, not distracted from your journey, your goal, your mission there. I would encourage each one to tread the path lightly and hold hands along the way here with me. I await your joining with me, and I await our journey together. That is the lesson for this chapter.

There is much to tell you of importance, for you have now come to a place where you are trusting more and turning more, to inner guidance. This is wonderful news and it is news of the most profound significance there. As you trust into your journey with divine guidance, with the truth of whom and what you are, you will feel into the flow of your being as it ushers forth unceasingly.

Now much of what you have experienced there is meant to bring you into your divine connection. Much of what you have learned is meant to find for you, the information needed to learn of the reality of the spiritual dimension, your true self. For you exist there in a body of light as you are now living. You are a body of light which is inhabiting physical body at this time. Your light body is your eternal body and is that which you have as the eternality of you. Your physical body is a result of your conditioned thinking which has closed off the truth of you. For you are indeed, that which is mighty in your infinite Wholeness, and you have now not been aware of this.

I can tell you that you are much more, but it is for you to experience there, that the truth of this will be fully known. Now we here, are bringing to bear on your circumstances, what could be called breaking through the illusions and finding the way for you to hear what we are saying to you. We are breaking through the shell of ignorance and isolation frequently there and allowing for the mystical and the spiritual reality of you, the truth of you, to find its way into the light of day.

No hidden agendas do we have, nor calculated tricks do we play, but rather, sincerely and openly we attempt to get you to wake up, to see the light of day after the dark night you have had. Do you not see whom and what you really are? Wake up, dear one, wake up! Now turn inward and find anew that which was lost, but now can be found. Find anew the truth of existence there. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

As we turn lovingly toward the guidance within, and as we ask there for our next steps to be made known to us, let us not think that our own identity, our self hood, is extinguished. For truly, even as you listen and live from guidance, you have your own identity there. You who exist there as a created one are not superimposed on another, nor are you a puppet on a string, nor a chime extolling only the whispered voices within here. For you do have an identity and a mission that can be called yours only. You have a mission that only you can bring forth there. You see, your mission is of the utmost importance for the Allness, the Wholeness to be fulfilled, to experience that which you give, as you.

I have spoken to you of guidance and of turning to the Father's will for your next step, and I do mean that to be the truth, but you also must realize that you have desires that are legitimate, and that are worthy of pursuing as you. You are not meant to be an automaton there. We here want you to experience your fullness as you, and not to give up your desires, nor your understanding of individuality.

But as you engage with your Wholeness, you will experience yourself as that which is a part of a much larger movement of a singularity of meaning, expressed throughout creation. Now this singularity is truly the will of the Source, as it is the movement of love felt multidimensionally in and through each and every one. This movement of love is that which puts all in order and brings into alignment the discordant mind sets there. The movement of love from your Source is the melody of creation as it ushers forth furtively there. Ever anew, dear one, truly you are meant to experience life ever anew, renewed and newly born are you each and every moment. Born again into the renewing love and forward movement that is the very nature of you.

As you bring into your life this abundant love as you, the ordering aspects and the progression will occur. Now turn within, and as you identify with your guidance, but as you individually, and as a part of the greater Wholeness, think not that you are swallowed up in a gargantuan movement that disallows who and what you are to be felt and embraced fully as the entity of you, the individuality of you. You are not alone there and we love you, as you. That is the truth of things dear one, truly that is the truth.

Chapter 66

We are working mightily to give you the necessary and compelling reasons to search there. We are giving you a set of experiences that will bring you to a place of true curiosity and a place of questing there. For this is the mind set to have as you find the connection to spirit to be real for you. Now you will turn within more often and you will ask of your guide, who am I, what is going on here, and are you real? Then will come the multiple and ongoing messages given to you that will verify to you the truth of our guidance there for you.

As the experiences mount, there will be no conclusion to make but that you are indeed, a spiritual being joined there and living from relationship. Such a marvel this will be for you, as you move lovingly into this space. Such a marvel for you to have, dear one, for you will then open up a vista of life unknown to you before. Now will come forth such joy, for at last you will understand that your life is meant to be lived in connection, always. Not without fall backs, nor sidesteps, but then with a retrieval of the knowing, the guidance, and the forward movement will you live in the ongoing understanding.

You will be led to that which will be the perfect book, or speaker or experience that will bring you to your further releasing of the mind set of separation. As you continue on, you will delight in life as it unfolds anew, ever ready to gift you and provide for you the way to find the truth of you. I can assure you that you are given all that you need to move forward there. Now we are ready to gift you with fulfillment beyond what you could have ever hoped for, nor dreamed of. For not in the material things, nor in the fame, will your fulfillment be felt, but in the relationship of such sublimity and such peace and such safety and security will you find that fulfillment.

Now that does not mean that you may not gain wealth or fame or fortune or any of the world views of success, but these will pale in the light of the loving relationship of magnificence within. You will truly delight in this dear one, as you partake fully.

And so, relationship is the key to your fulfillment, always. Now let these words sink in and let them penetrate your mind set of separation. Ask that I join with you and ask that you be given what you need to know to move lovingly forward there, to the path, your mission there. And I will answer you. I will not leave you without the perfect knowing there. As this chapter on true fulfillment is closing, I urge you to not move on without first turning here to your guide within your conscious awareness. Turn here now and ask for our connection to be made. I am here for you and I will not disappoint you. You are indeed, One with me, with the Wholeness there. Let in and allow, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 67

Let us now open up and receive the gift of relationship. As you have journeyed in your life and you have felt alone, now you can claim a relationship that will bring to you, real companionship there. Real companionship is available to you and will alleviate your loneliness as nothing else will. For this companion is a companion of nonsolubility. Never to depart from you there and never to allow you to be stranded through the muck and mire of the separated way.

I see you for whom you truly are. And I see you as one who is indeed my sister or my brother. As you let the mind set of the ego way, the separated way, be allowed to dissipate, you will marvel in what lies before you, and you will marvel in the love that embraces you there. Now what is here for you to embrace is what could be called a friend of the most dearest kind. For this friend will not judge you there as unworthy, nor cast doubt as to his veracity, nor his trustworthiness.

No, this friend will honor you for the place you are at in your journey and will help you move step by step forward in releasing the mind set of ego there. As the strategies to undermine your peace are felt, they will be seen for what they are, insubstantial and ungrounded empty reasonings and rationales that are hollow in their entirety for you.

Now these defenses, these strategies of the ego to undermine your peace, are truly not that which are of substance and can be disregarded again and again. For they are truly there to instill fear and hatred and unworthiness and distractibility to you. Even in the small ways, the ego is looking for ways to dissuade you from experiencing your truth. And so as the habits occur that hurl you into that self-harming mode, that abusing mode, you can be assured that as you use the true means of undoing the ego, that is, the turning to relationship within, and the disregarding of the incantations given you, you will then be free. Free to live and love and free to engage in our delightful unfolding together. Now these are important words for you to hear and these are words that will bring you comfort and courage along the way. You are not alone there, dear one, truly you are not alone. I am with you there, always. Turn here and let in, for indeed, we are not alone ever. Let in and allow, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 68

Ready to be redeemed and brought back into the very truth of you as you find that you are now in connection there. For your redemption, which is another way to say, your salvation, is that which occurs as you bring to your life your innate and inherent divinity. You see, you are Whole now! You are complete, now! But you have long ago forgotten this and so you have lived a life that is far flung from this knowing.

Now you are ready to find what has always been there but what was lost along the way. What a grand discovery this is and what a relief to know that your life is, in fact, directly connected, a part of your Source there, always. You are not alone there, ever. You are met with the love of your Father and you are joined there as you live. Now this is the truth of things, dear one. Truly, this is the truth of things. You are joined and held tightly and with the grace that will lovingly guide you through the maze you are living in.

Now do not let these words feel as that which are only meant to comfort you, but not bring to you real and transforming and life changing experiences of whom and what you are. These words will indeed, redeem you there, for they are of the most important that you could hear. You are truly meant to be a movement of your Source and you are meant to come forth lovingly into the forward progression, the unfolding, the newness, always. This is your birthright, and this is the way you were created. Ever unfolding anew and ever being transformed into the more of you there. I can tell you, that as you do live from your connection, you will find the truth there. Let in and allow, dear one, truly let in and allow. These are words of great importance and they are words to not take lightly. I am here, let in and allow my love to be felt by you. We are One there, now and forever. Let in and allow, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 69

I am with you this day and so you can count on the availability of direct guidance as you are ready to access it there. What is it you would like there, and what is it that is causing you anxiety there? What are you faced with as you live, and who is it that is causing you dis-ease? All these things can be met easily with inner guidance, and as the truth of you, the love which you are is brought forth, the answers will be made known to you.

Now easily will the problems of life be dealt with, and as you see the perfect way in which things unfold, you will marvel at the ease and the outcome given there. Now all those who are involved in your life will benefit and will be made to feel as those which are honored and valuable, for it is in recognizing that all are valuable and worthy of love and care and guidance, that the movement will unfold there for you as it should.

And so, it is as we look at the total picture you are involved in and in the great numbers who are impacted by the movement, that the next step is taken and given to you. We here, see the transcendent picture, and we see the movement of all those impacted there, and as we do so bring you your guidance we do so observe and allow.

It is not our way to gift one at the expense of another, unless that one may feel in some way benefitted by what has transpired. Now always, we take into consideration, the entire movement of your life. You see, you are never one who travels and acts independently or without the outcome felt on many levels. For always, your life is impactful there. And so, in the smallest of ways and in the largest of ways your choices impact others. You are choosing to hear or not. You are choosing to listen and follow or not, and you are impacting others accordingly. And so, as you let your little habit patterns be released, this also is impacting others and giving them strength to let go of theirs. As you show honesty in a situation, this also impacts others to be honest there. Each thing is impactful and each thought is known and has an impact there.

Now always are you held in the arms of love, the mind set of your Source, your Creator, and you are not judged there. Your actions will bring to you consequences, as they are given the response which comes from separation, but as you do so join and ask for change in the way you live, you will be given the strength and the know-how to make that change. In the smallest ways and in the big ways, change can happen there for you. And so dear one, turn here, and ask for guidance to be felt there. You are not alone there ever. Let in and allow, for indeed, we are One.

Chapter 70

I am guiding you as you live there. As you open up to receive you will understand how my guidance is ready to assist you as you do so desire. You have lived a lifetime of separateness and you have chosen again and again to live from the enculturated way, the way of your culture and your media. You have chosen again and again to take the path that has been given to you to follow by your others there who have an historical basis upon which to guide you. But this way has not brought with it the information, the view from the transcendent, which has the entirety as its scope. For your movement is indeed, that which is one that reverberates with a much larger involvement.

Now you can continue on with the way you are living and experience the rewards and the consequences that have been told to you or you can abandon that way and turn to your guidance. Now this is a significant difference. This is a difference of immense proportions there, for as you do so turn inward, you will find the perfect unfolding for you, and for your others as you choose to listen and follow.

Only as you agree and risk the outcome to life as that which is held in perfect grace and perfect harmony, will you finally trust completely in the movement. As you desire to open up more, remember that I am here for you, dear one, I am here for you, and I love you with a love that is unbounded for you.

Now as you have taken the step to read this book, and as you have now experienced some curiosity as to what the difference might be as you live and move from guidance, you have asked for your guidance to be experienced more fully, and indeed I have heard. Now let us quietly let your busy mind set go, let the thoughts which consume you go and turn effortlessly here. I will guide you there as you do so come into relationship here. Let your mind set of curiosity open up to you, the unbounded and transcendent resources from the Source, and let the love you experience be felt always as the very truth of you. I am with you there always, never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 71

We are working with you to further your desire to find out more of the truth of life there. We are working unceasingly to give you the needed impetus to search for the more of you that is there to be found. Now you may say that you are satisfied with your life, for you have found some measure of happiness. You are content to endure the hardships there and the sufferings that have been experienced by you, and you have shrugged it off as life. You have excused your difficulties as that which is a normal part of life and that which is necessary for all to go through. You have denied any inclination to rethink this or to question this, for it seems such a fundamental part of each one's experience.

Well, let me share with you something. Your idea of suffering is totally inappropriate, dear one. Your idea of unhappiness or limited joy is truly that which the ego is intent on instilling in you, for you are then held captive to its dictates as it insinuates itself as necessary as a defense there for you. And so you have created defenses that have walled you off from experiencing the truth of you. You have resorted to a mind set of adjustment, which is in all ways, faulty there. For your life is meant to be that which is whole, complete, joyous, and free of suffering, and all the things which subject you to pain. Your life is meant to be a movement of fulfillment there, and it is accessible to you. I can truly tell you, that as you do so open up to receive, you will find a much more harmonious way to live life, and a way that disclaims suffering, sickness, and ultimately disclaims even death, as unnecessary.

Now you may say that this is wishful thinking and filled with misconceptions. You say that there is evidence all around you that pain and suffering are a part of life, and death, disease and sorrow abound. Well, these mind sets are truly that which are made up. You are indeed, an eternal being, a spiritual reality composed of love, and living and moving from that same love. Now love is not that which suffers as inherent to it. Love is not that which dies at its end point and love is not that which holds anything disharmonious in its energy field. You are this love and you have this spiritual reality created and sustained by the love that is you.

Now the call is to claim this, dear one. Claim this and disavow your belief in the mind set of suffering, pain, and sorrow. These things can be allowed to dissipate. The eternal reality of you will come forth. You are spiritual, you are eternal, and you are the movement of love made manifest. That is the truth there, that is the truth.

Chapter 72

Let us not tarry with that which would delude us. Let us not stay involved with that which provides nothing of value for us. For always, your life experience should be that which provides value for you and provides meaning for you as you live. Now the ego, that defense system ingrained in your consciousness, is mightily intent on you being influenced by what you think will provide happiness. And so you give up your energy and your life blood for material gain and for the accumulation of money there.

Now the emptiness of this way is paramount to valuing trash, dear one, for money in and of itself is only paper. The money you have worked so hard to accumulate represents to you, security, for you see it as a way to guarantee the wants and needs you have there. You see money as invaluable for furthering your desires and your interests. Well dear one, always money is that which is only instrumental and certainly cannot be an end point in itself, for it is hollow and it is vaporous in what it can give you.

The money, which is seen as of such value in working for there, is often far in excess of what is actually needed. Far in excess and that which has the ability to occupy one's time and talents as it appears to be worthy of great efforting to acquire and manage. But the ultimate benefit of money is to provide a means to get one's needs met and this can be felt largely as getting one's physical needs met. For your spiritual needs are truly available free of charge. You are spirit and your turning to this is a gift to you without financial strings attached. This greatest of meaning and purpose for you is free and is there to partake of as you so desire.

Now we here understand that money appears to be absolutely necessary for you and it appears as that which is easily lost and used there. It appears as if there is a shortage in your life of this, and it appears that you will have to work the rest of your days to live there, to finance living. Well, you can count on true living as you come into the spiritual relationship with inner guidance, with the truth of who you are. Now your resources will enlarge there mightily, and you will feel the security of true worth. Only as you do embrace this place within will your true identity, that which is priceless, come forth there. I am with you and will not leave you alone there. Let in and allow dear one, truly that is the call there. Let in and allow. You are, indeed, One.

Chapter 73

I would encourage each and every one of you, to take the time necessary to honor your spiritual nature, to get to know the truth of you and to abide and live from this reality. Now the time that you take there to first, become aware of spirit, and then, to know yourself as this spirit, and then to be the truth of whom and what you are, will vary for each one. Each one is in a place where they have allowed the separated way to be felt there and some more than others. Some who read this book, will find snippets of information to wonder about and allow to enter in, and others will have found what they have hungered and thirsted after for so long.

Some will outright reject this as only wishful thinking or may even see it as someone's delusion. These ones are the ones who need persuading in a different way, and they will have guidance that will work with them in the way that is best for them. For those who find that this seed falls on fertile ground, the seed will grow mightily, and the harvest of spiritual understanding will come forth for you.

Now if you cannot find in this writing what rings true to you at your point of unfolding, your movement will be in another way or place, and so it is all right to let this go. But I would encourage even those of you who cannot embrace this, to take at least a few moments to ask if guidance is really there. Allow yourself some curiosity to ask at least for guidance to make him/herself known to you. Now do not think that you are being given a trick if you hear something, or feel something within you. Do not think that you are manipulated there, for indeed, your spiritual nature, your guide, is working mightily to arouse your curiosity to get you to inquire more, to open you to a greater experience, and to urge you on there. In all love is this done, for we here love you mightily. We love you and we want for you to know whom and what you are. We want you to embrace the larger perspective of life and feel into the love that you are. You are not alone there ever, dear one. Now take the time necessary to inquire within. I am with you, truly not alone.

I would encourage each and everyone, in whatever path of life you are now walking, to take the words written here as of utmost importance for you. In every walk of life, from every religious view point, and from every ideological system, take these words to heart. Now as you do so take these words to heart, and as you do so listen with intent to hear, you will enter that state of union which is bounteous in its sublime gifts for you. If you are one who is motivated by reward, you will find it here. If you are motivated by service, you will find the words significant here, and if you are motivated by the search for truth, indeed, you have found it.

Many who have learned of their direct connection have begun the journey to truth and have discovered that which brings verification within again and again. For as you allow for your connection to the divine to come forth, and as you realize that you are a direct manifestation of the divine, you will resonate with the love which puts all in perfect order for you. Easily and without effort will your being resonate to the truth of you. As the energy of living love resonates there, your very being will sing with the beauty and bounty of this way of living, the created way, the way of your Source. Happy will your journey be there as you laugh away the seeming distresses of life, for they will pale in importance as you feel into the safety and the security of your being, your created self.

Many have discovered and many are discovering this and we here, on the other side, join in the rapture of those who now resonate to truth there. We join in the rapture of joy as more and more connect. Mightily are we feeling your peace and your forward movement. And as the ground swell of beings on your planet now move lovingly forward, the great change over will occur. For just as when the majority wins so does the majority bring to bear on others, the truth, and the truth will have its way, must have its way.

At last, at last, the truth will come forth for your planet, dear one. What a glorious day that will be, for now the movement will usher in on many levels, your place in the multidimensional levels of life, your place in the great planetary unfolding of the universe and of other created beings everywhere. And so the forward movement of each one is of the utmost importance there. You are not singular in your experience as an individual and as a planet. You are involved mightily there. Now let these words move you to hear and open to receive. We are One, now and forever.

Chapter 75

Let us embark on an adventure together. For your journey will be filled with adventurous things and will be exhilarating in its newness for you. Now these are not empty promises, dear one. No, these are not words of deception, there. Your journey to truth, your unfolding, will be felt as that which is brand new each day, each hour, and each minute. Brand new is my love for you and ever unfolding anew is your life.

Now this is the very nature of life, to be born again each day and to experience this newness with freshness and expectancy. I can tell you that depression will become a thing of the past, and will certainly be that which is laughed at, as you view your life there. How could you ever be depressed if you understand the very truth of you? For the ever unfolding anew journey will be exactly right for you there and will open up to you horizons which resonate with beauty and truth.

Each moment of our connection will harbor safety, peace, and security, and each moment of our togetherness will usher in for you, great fulfillment and great expectations. We do not want for our beloved ones, anything but the best for them, and we want for our others much that now is not known to you. For your unfolding will usher in a great awakening which is unforeseen by you now. It is as you trust into this and as you connect here that the glimpses of what lies ahead will be felt.

Now we have heard your voices as you have called out to us to intervene in what you have labelled horrific and dangerous times. We have heard your cries there. We have seen what the separated way has brought forth, but realize it as only the hollow drum beat of egos moving with the defenses that have been dragging the human race down for eons of time. Now this drum beat of danger will slowly lose its paralyzing beat, and ultimately, will disappear there. For the hollow sound of these defenses will lose its clarity as the mind set of eons is let go of and as the new ushers in.

How wonderful will this be for you that exist there in this dimension! How wonderful will you feel, as at last you will find anew the truth of you, that you are connected in the most profound way there, and that you are not alone there ever. You are created beings and you have the Source, the Originator directly available to you always. You are a direct creation which has the seed core, the spiritual reality of the Father right there, right now. You are spirit, dear one, and you are ever joined there. Now as this chapter comes to a close, turn quietly inward. Ask for love to be brought forth there and feel into my presence with you. Never alone, truly never alone.

Chapter 76

We are working mightily with you, and as you open up to receive, you will experience our presence. Now you must want to live the joined way there, for we cannot over ride your free will. You must want to live from divine connection and you must ask for our presence to be known to you.

Never can we manipulate you into joining, nor trick you there. This is not a Halloween trick, nor is it a card game of winners and losers. No, It is a way of living, in all ways, that which is for you, as you so will. Your free will is intrinsic to you and we cannot over ride this ever. But as you do so open up to receive, we can mightily work with you there, to let go of the mountains of decisions that have separated us. We can, one by one, show you how your thinking has led you astray there. Each decision which caused the chasm, the gulf in your awareness, will be released, and the view from the perspective of your Source will be seen.

Now you are entering a time of decision making there and you are coming to a place in your conscious awareness where these things will be wondered about. You will wonder and you will ask as one who is curious to know more, are you there? Is there someone there for me? Do I too, have a guide? And indeed, we will answer you mightily there. It is as you allow for this to unfold for you and as you do so seek that the answers will be given. And so I urge each one to quiet your conditioned thinking. Quiet your thinking mind set now, and close your eyes. Be still, ask in the way of a humble child to a parent, to have your guidance made known to you. Now is the time, dear one, now is the time.

We are in this together, and we are working with you to overcome and to release, all that holds you in limbo there, in a place of confusion. Now you are held in a space of ongoing questioning from your place of separation, and you find that the answers are not always fruitful for you. Your answers, given from the ego framework or the mind set of the separated way, are often that which increases your confusion and augments your sense of distress, for one move of separation leads to another, and so your life becomes a series of problems to overcome and master that which is seen as imperfect and inadequate there.

Always your ego presents to you, answers based on the way of separation. For your culture has a motivation to undermine your peace, as that is where control can be had, in a state of uneasiness. Now your culture sees you as that which is there for those who would extend power to control for the sake of monetary gain or for extricating that which benefits the corporations there. Truly you are caught in a web of dishonesty and a mind set of deceit. As you are now able to see this more and more, you ask, how can I extricate myself from this, and how can I alleviate my suffering, my dis-ease as I find myself here?

Now the good news is there, dear one, and the good news is readily available for you. For you see, you have a resource there which is intrinsic to you. You have a way to escape the anxiety and the dis-ease that you find yourself in. As you learn of this way and as you partake of this way, you will find the discomfort leaving you, and you will now resonate to the truth there. We are with you there in the quiet place within. Your lifeline, your transmittal line is there, direct to the transcendent. This is a part of you, not separate from you, but you have not known of this before.

You have now heard of this and are willing to try living from the wisdom gained here, and so I would encourage each and every one to quiet their conditioned thinking and ask for guidance to be known to them. I would encourage each and every one to take the time necessary to find your inner guidance, your friend, your perfect unfolding there. You are never alone, dear one, truly, you are never alone.

As guidance is now available to you as you have opened up to hear, you will find the presence of intelligence there. And you can now access this intelligence, as you do so live here. For the intelligence from the divine is of the very nature of you. As you have lived there, basing your thinking on past experience, or on what you have heard from others, you have allowed for an intelligence that does not carry with it the picture from the perspective of the Father there. You have been given intelligence that is based on limitation and on outcomes that are usually of selfish and/or of self preservation for you. This way of thinking is a way of limitation and insecurity, for always, it departs from what would truly help you there.

But times are now changing. Times are changing for you, for you have turned to guidance there and have allowed for your inner intelligence, your knowing from the transcendent to come forth. I would encourage each and every one who is reading this, to move into the quiet place of conscious awareness and ask for your intelligent next step to be had there. As you experience the right way, the way of transcendent to be made known to you, you will move into the way of living that will feel so right for you. Now the call is to open up there and let your spiritual truth come forth.

As you have often asked of guidance to show you the way, continue on until you are hearing what is so necessary for you there. Turn here and open up to receive, for I know what will help you there. I know what will transpire there for you as you do so open up to receive. You are not alone there dear one, truly, you are not alone. I am with you. Let these words of abiding with and allowing for the divine intelligence of you to come forth, be heard there. Now is the time, now is the time.

Chapter 79

There is much that is waiting for you which is inherently beneficial to you. Much that you have not opened up to and allowed to come into your world there. Now as you have closed off your direct connection to the infinite, to your Creator, you have allowed for a careless and haphazard way of life to be lived. You have allowed for the purveyors of chance to lead the way. Truly, your life is held in the mind of the Source there as you live and has not departed from it. Your mind is indeed, connected, and has as its substrate, the consciousness of the Infinite. And this Infinite Mind has as its purpose, bringing you into ever unfolding anew fulfillment there.

Now these words are the truth of you and they are words that are of the most wonderful for you. As you become familiar with your divine presence within, the holy spirit of you, the mind set you are meant to live from, you will then find increased and direct movement into your Wholeness, whom and what you really are. Each day, each turning inward, allows for the mind set of ignorance to dissipate there.

Now your experiences will mount and you will discern that there really is no other way to live life. For this way is so satisfying, so joined with love, and so complete in its experience, that you can move wonderfully forward there. Not with uncertainty, but rather with a curiosity to find what will unfold anew for you. Such joy to live from your divine mind, your Infinitude! And such wonder as the blessings, the knowing, and the intelligence from the Father come forth there for you. Now your security is here, dear one. Your security and your support are truly here. Let your life unfold as it was meant to, ever unfolding anew with fulfillment and possibility as its inherent and certain nature. Never alone there, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 80

As we journey together there, and as you are faced with so much that causes you to feel uncomfortable in your life, you can find your solace in our togetherness. Truly this is the way to surmount or pass through those difficult points in your life. For our journey is one that is secure here. Our journey is not dependent on the tides of time to dissipate it, nor the disruptions caused by enormous cultural pressures there.

No, our relationship is secure, and it is that which is the way for you to bridge the hopelessness and the helplessness of a culture gone awry. And so the call is to hold fast to your guide, to the truth within, for we have the picture from the transcendent there. We have your best interests at heart and we are not held in the miasma of ignorance so rampant on your planet at this time.

We are ready to assist you there, dear one, are ready to assist you as you do so live there. Now the call for you is to call on me! Call on me to join you as you live there. For you are met always with the warmth, love, companionship and good will of one who loves you. Such comfort is this, such comfort is this, for you here. Now do not let the mind set of ignorance lead you into distress. Do not let the ongoing and ever more pressing dictates of a culture based on greed consume you. No, you can hold on to the truth of you there. You can hold on to the truth of you and allow for the mind set of the separated way to be released. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 81

What a joy to understand and to embrace, without reservation, the love and the togetherness of you and I. For I have such a journey of love for you there. I have a journey of liberation from the mind-numbing and fear-instilling media driven and politically reinforced culture you have created there. For your life in the time you are living in is indeed, one of polarization and paralyzation. You are given messages of a world filled with hate and a world in need of strong defense. You are given a world view of such potential disaster that you feel unable to work and move with freedom to be whom and what you are.

Now as you have felt the fear, and as you have been given the incantations of the culturally driven and fiercely reinforced need to acquiesce to the dictates primarily of the financial institutions, but also to the governmental need for compliance, you have felt alone and abandon there and you have felt helpless in your plight and your isolation there. These things we have seen as the situation on the Earth at this time and we have put efforts into moving those who would so move, to share with others, the wonderful news of direct connection there. For as you hear again and again the availability of direct guidance, you will entertain the idea that this, indeed, may be true, that this may be that which is worthy of trying there.

As your curiosity is entertained and as you open the door even with a small interest, you will find there more to discover and so your further involvement with spirit will continue. What a joy you will now have as your experiences mount, of spiritual involvement there. What a joy for you to discover the more of you to be had there. You are not alone there, dear one.

We are working with the most sincere intention, to bring you into the very truth of you, the Wholeness of you, and we are not abandoning your world there, ever. We are intrinsically involved with you and see you as our own, as a part of whom and what we are, as the fullness of the Source expressing. Each one has value and each one has worth beyond measure. Now as the movement of life unfolds there for you with the interest in the spiritual dimension felt mightily there, let your life open up to a greater and more complete awareness of whom and what you are. You are divine and you are my brother or sister. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.

Chapter 82

Abide with me. Here is an abode of true light and love, true safety and security, and true freedom. Here, in the quiet sanctuary of the heart, I long for you to join me. I long for you to share the love and the mighty blessings, the peace and the joy, the everlastingness of our relationship, together. We are met there with such tranquility in our journey together, that any thought of dis-ease is truly unthinkable. The calm and the peace, the quiet inner glow of love we share is such a delight for us here.

As we walk the banks of the living waters, the stream of God-consciousness flows through us, and we abandon our sense of dis-ease, forever. The healing waters of living love nourish and feed us mightily, and we are rejuvenated. Laughingly we tarry, hand in hand, delighting in our path and merrily and jauntily we travel the journey there. Hand in hand we go, through the seeming miles of what could be viewed from one perspective as harrowing and frightening terrain, but we have the sublime union of each other to look at and laugh with and to find solace and comfort there, and so our journey is seen as a delight, a true delight there. Each and every step is relished in and each and every step is held in safety there.

Now the journey becomes an adventure in love and an adventure in fulfillment, as each day opens up new vistas for us, of potential and fulfillment. Ever unfolding anew, we tread together into this journey throughout eternity. This is our eternal journey as our Source would have us live it there. This is our journey of love and it is the journey which is our destiny. We can only embrace it, dear one, and as you may think that these words are poetic and are meant to air brush a life of pain and suffering and are truly delusional in nature, let me assure you that they are not.

For they are words of truth and are words of the inherent wonder of our Source, our Creator, there. This is our created heritage and it is now available as never before, for you are waking up there. You are waking up into the divine state of you, the natural and divine inheritance which is yours. Let these words penetrate deeply into your conditioned thinking, and drive a wedge into the idea of life as pain and suffering. Truly, you are meant to embrace and fully engage in this life and to do it as one joined. You are not alone there, ever. You are met always with love and guidance. That is the truth of it.

Chapter 83

We are One in spirit and we are One in intention. Our Oneness with our Source is inherent in whom and what we are, and our Oneness is not something that is arbitrary there. No, our Oneness is an absolute, a truth, and a certainty. For our Oneness is only misunderstood as one chooses to live from separation.

Now indeed, many live from separation and cannot see the Oneness of life. They have chosen a path which allows for limitation to be felt and lived from, and they have allowed for the defenses of mind, the ego framework, to work mightily in their lives. This separated sense of self sees life as that which is alienated and that which is a struggle to get through. They have viewed the world as that which is filled with obstacles to overcome and limitations inherent within it. And so their lives have been filled with developing strategies to deal with the situation there. Covering all of this is a nicety, a pleasantness and a world view of sympathy to others. But the basic premise is wrong! The basic premise of separation is wrong!

This is important to know and to look at for what has happened here to you. Over time and over the millennia the perpetration of a mind set of limitation has impelled itself into your consciousness, and you have lived from protection and from paranoia. Fear-based and insecure you have felt there. We have observed you as you have found such narrowness in your lives and we have not been without sadness there. But we do claim our hope in the eternalness, the truth of life and the knowingness of what the nature of Source really is, and we carry this with us here on the invisible plane. Now our task of life to you, our mission to you, is to penetrate the mind set of ignorance so rampant there, and to bring a clearing to the mind set of fear, and so we are working to bring this to you with an earnestness of beloved family members, of Oneness there.

We would urge each and every one to turn quietly inward and ask that these words find a home to live in there. May the fertile ground of your heart open to receive these words and as they bear fruit may you move lovingly into your Wholeness. We are indeed One there, ever One.

As we come to a time of closing of this book and as we begin to incorporate into our being what has been said here, let us not dismiss this as an oddity, nor as an incidental thing in our conscious awareness. For this volume has within it, the seed bed of your transformation there. Truly, as you read these pages, you have been given what you need to know to begin the unfolding into the truth of whom and what you are. Your mind set of limitation is fast losing its hold and you are allowing for the very fundamental truth of you to usher forth mightily there.

What joy this is for us on the invisible plane as we dwell there with you! What joy this is as a crack in the mind set of separation has allowed for the ground swell of living love to come pouring forth. As the days and weeks pass by and as you begin the inward journey to liberation, know that your outcome is secure, your destiny is guaranteed, and your inheritance remains solidly there for you. We are busily engaged with you there and we are working with all the stops pulled out, all the horsepower in play, and the throttle of full speed ahead is given.

Knowingly and with intention we bring this to you and we are giving this word to those whose hearts are fertile for the seeds to grow and produce fruit. Water the seeds daily with the nourishment of divine intention and then see the beauty and the bounty of your garden of delights. Such a bounteous life we have for you, dear one. Such a bounteous life do we have for you there! Now let your life unfold mightily and let your full curiosity be roused. For we have given you what you need to live there. The correct words of inner transformation and the guidance to live by.

Let your mind then join here with me now, and let us find our greatest joy in the relationship we have. Now in the remaining pages we will give you some very specific ways to allow for guidance to come forth and so read them and try them. I am here for you always. Never alone.

Chapter 85

In the remaining pages, we will look directly at how you can access your guidance, and we will give you step by step methods for doing this. You see, we are not interested in this being a secret, nor are we interested in your struggling there. We want to make the way plain for you, and we want you to find the steps easily, without any difficulty and without frustration. That is the reason for these steps and that is the reason for this book.

Let us begin with telling you about the proper mind set to have as you do begin to get in touch with guidance. You see, because you have engaged with the separated mind set for so long, yea, for eons, you have habits there which are ingrained and will take some time to disallow, certainly not insurmountable, but will take some practicing to do. And so we would ask you to have the habit of practicing and coming here, again and again. Practicing is what is called for.

We would ask you to have the mind set of a clear space, an empty space in your mind. Now this is a step which can cause some problems for people, for the busy mind is the norm there. Attempt to clear your mind of all busy thoughts, all concerns you are having, and let all worries and anxieties be released. Now attempt to get into this clear space. It is a place located in the area between your eyes and within your forehead there. This is the place to concentrate on and feel the presence of an energy, a clearing, as you do so proceed there. A movement of energy will be felt as you continue on. But you must feel this as subtle, very subtle and not as that which is greater than a brief brushing or wisp, a magnetic presence perhaps?

Now the call is to stay in this quiet place as you sit there or lie there and allow for a few moments with this quietness there. Then ask gently for your guidance to be made known to you, for my presence to be made known to you. In a way specific to you, will the answer be given. Each one will have spiritual guidance given in a way that only they will know. Now you may ask a simple question of your guide or express a desire. Ask that you be shown the answer there. Ask that you be shown the answer to your quest in a way that you will understand. Now pay attention.

In the time frame that follows in that day, or in a time frame in which spirit will express, you will get an answer.

Now we must emphasize that as with anything you practice, there will be misunderstandings along the way. But as you stay with the process, the within place, and the practice, you will become more and more proficient with this. You must stay with! And you must not give up! Now do not let frustration or lack of what you feel is a knowable answer dissuade you there. Stay with there, always.

Now if you do so wish, you may use pencil and paper to ask your question, again, getting into the quiet place and asking that the answer be given you. At first, you may think that your answer is coming from your thinking mind set, but as your skill and as your experiences mount you will feel the difference and the answer will provide for you a better way for your next steps to be made. The intention and sincerity and the persistence are important but your desires will be heard there.

Now you must understand that your questions and your desires must be that which will not cause harm to anyone, but must be that which benefits the Whole. Now, though wealth and fame are often asked for, and these things do often come forth, the true fulfillment of you will be given you and this may include a much different scenario than what you have thought might provide your happiness.

Remember, the guidance from divinity, from transcendence, is guidance which has the whole picture as its frame work and so trust that your loving guidance knows the way. That is the truth of it. Now in closing, let the words carry on to the next step, which is actual practice. Come here to me, and I will love you and show you the way. Never alone there, dear one, truly never alone.

In closing, I will share with you something which you can take with you as you journey there. I will share with you something of immense worth. Your life is truly precious to me. Your life is truly a life that I know there. You have been known to me through many lifetimes and I have followed you as you have lived there. I know those who dwell there, and I have my mind, my eye on you, my heart involved with you. I have loved those who exist there on the earth plane, for eons of time, and I have wanted you to come into your right mind, your knowing mind, as you have allowed it to be left as languishing there in the miasma of separation.

Now I am earnestly asking you to come home. I am earnestly asking for your returning to your mind of true sanity, your joined perspective, your transcendent mind there. As this book has left its imprint on you, and as you have wondered more now than at other times, let your curiosity open to you, the more of you there.

Now the time to find your joy is here, and the time to open up to receive fully, is here. Let the story of John and Kara and their dear family, and the life they led, be an example to you of how life can be lived there. And let my love for you be felt fully as you open to receive. May the joy of our life together be a rich blessing for you, for truly I will experience it, too. Never alone, dear one, truly never alone.
