

At Journey's End

A fact that each must face,
Is that life on Earth will end.
Your fleshy body will be gone,
And you will then ascend.

You'll leave what you have known there,
This so familiar place,
Your spirit body moves ahead,
Returns to its home base.

Gladly you'll be greeted,
By familiar faces who,
Will welcome you back home there,
Not strange, at all, to you.

There will be a time of self review—
To look at how you've lived,
You'll see where love was given,
And when you failed to give.

No punishment is given,
But you will feel so bad,
For love you failed to give there,
In this, you will be sad.

You'll see your life as a lesson,
To Increase your true resolve,
To be God's point of light here,
In love, you'll have evolved.

Each lifetime that you've chosen,
Is another chance to live,
To be the love you are, dear,
To help, to share, to give.

You're still alive to read this,
Join within, right there,
We'll move as One together,
God's Love, we'll gladly share.

Do not fear the exit,
I'm with you all the way,
Just live each day with love, there,
Until that final day.

A poem about the end there,
Is but a chance to pause,
And dwell on our Dear Maker,
His Love and Our First Cause!
