

Mother's Day 2024

Today, we honor Mothers,
The birthing pains they bore,
So we could come into the world,
They opened up life's door.

They brought us up the best they could,
Sometimes, 'twas not ideal,
Yet bonds of love were woven,
Were deeply felt, so real.

Most Mothers want the same thing,
From children given this day,
They want to know they matter,
Not forgotten, pushed away.

Today, I tell all mothers,
And children of mothers, too,
You are not forgotten,
I'm here, with love, for you.

With Me, there's no estrangement,
No separation's there,
We're bound as One together,
Wombish love we share.

I urge you to remember,
Your Mom, reach out this day!
Your love will warm her heart, dear,
Show her you care this way.

On this day and always,
Alone, you'll never be.
I am with you always,
Bound as One, are we.
