

Tell Others

You have come to know Me,
We know each other well,
You've found your truth within, there,
Now this, to others, tell.

Don't keep this truth a secret,
It's meant for all to know,
That I'm directly there within,
For each, My love to show.

You're christened as a witness,
You've chosen this to share,
Your mission now, to tell the world,
That I'm directly there.

The time, the place, the wherefore,
Will, to you, be shown,
I'll guide you in your mission,
'Til whom to tell is known.

This grand and noble purpose,
Will fill your willing heart,
Joy will be the outcome,
As truth, you do, impart.

We'll give the gift together,
Its placement, number one,
First, in efforts given,
'Til time on earth is done.

'Twill be in many ways, dear,
You'll show that I'm right there,
You'll hesitate no longer,
To witness, truth to share.

The greatest mission given,
To help humanity,
To tell the world I'm there within,
To bring Transcendancy.

I'm at the gate where living love,
Will open up to you,
And pour forth its great healing,
God's meaning coming though.

*Tell them all I love them,
Say that I'm right there,
I'm waiting to be asked on in,
I have such love to share!*

In closing of this poem, dear,
I tell you what you've known.
I love you and am with you,
You are not alone.
