

Clearly You Will Know

I'm trusting in your guidance, Lord,
And listening for what you say.
Patiently I'm waiting,
For what you bring my way.

I try to quell my nerves, Lord,
Try to abandon fear,
But I need to find a home, Lord,
The time is drawing near.

When I will sell my home, Lord,
And then must leave this place,
Waiting for your direction,
Of where to live in grace.

The door will soon be open,
Clearly, you will know,
That home is where the heart is,
Your heart, your home, will show.

Your needs are very simple,
A place to live in peace,
You and I, together,
Where cares and worries cease.

You'll enter life's last chapter,
You'll witness to others, there,
That I'm within directly,
For all, my love, to share.

Let peace fill up your mind, dear,
Soon, your home, you'll see,
Trust that what I tell you,
Will bring sweet harmony.

In closing of this poem, dear,
I restate what you have known,
I am with you always,
You are not alone.
