

Expect the New

You say you don't like change there,
You're happy with the old,
It's safe, familiar, easy,
The same old story, told.

What's new might pose a challenge,
That you're not ready for,
It may require giving up,
Your comfort zone and more.

You will not grow and prosper,
Nor feel fully alive,
If newness is forsaken.
Wanting only to survive.

Life given from your Creator,
Is filled with meaning, true,
Living love's this meaning,
Making all things new.

Together, we'll stay open,
Express curiosity,
In how God's newness gift's you,
Bestows luminosity.

The old no longer holds you,
It played its part, now past,
Happy to release it,
You're free of it, at last.

Your mind is filled with wonder,
As fulfillment comes to view,
Beyond imagination,
God's love, so fresh, so new!

You feel revitalization,
How joyful now are we,
In awe, you stand so vivified,
Once blinded, now you see.

Welcoming the new, there,
Is the mindset to embrace,
God wants only your fulfillment,
To bestow on you, His grace.

Our relationship of love, dear,
Though familiar stays so true,
Issuing forth God's meaning,
Living love's what makes it new.

We move as One together,
This Oneness you have known,
In truth, I love you, dearly,
You are never alone.
